LOWER BROADWAY IN GREAT UPROAR.

Fire and Explosion in New York Paint Shop.

Mail and Express and Western Union Buildings Threatened.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—A spectacular fire which did not do great financial damage, but which for a time threatened to spread to two large office buildings, in which thousands of persons are employed, threw lower Broadway into great turmoil and excitement this afternoon. The fire started in a paint shop in Fulton street, and, owing to the inflammable nature of the materials, soon spread to the other floors of the structure. There was an explosion, and then great sheets of flame leaped out and threatened the big buildings of the Western Union Telegraph Company and the Evening Mail.

Thousands of persons, many of them women, are employed in the upper portion of the Western Union building, and as it soon appeared that they were in danger they were directed to leave the building as rapidly as possible. This they did in good order, despite the great excitement that prevailed. Several of the young women fainted, and were carried out by their comrades.

Fire Chief Croker responded on the first alarm, and Deputy Police Commissioner Hanson rushed to the scene and took personal charge of the police. Commissioner Hanson ordered a large force of the mounted men into the district, and a cordon was drawn round the threatened area, to keep back the enormous crowds which stretched away for blocks in every direction. Dozens of fire engines were at once put to work, and the auxiliary fire-fighting apparatus in the threatened buildings was placed in commission immediately. In spite of the efficient work done by the fire department, the flames shooting out from the paint shop menaced the Western Union building for fully half an hour before Chief Croker was satisfied that he had the situation in hand.

The great crowds round the threatened area became much excited as they saw the hatless women and hurrying men leave the near-by structures. All traffic on Broadway and the neighboring side streets was completely interrupted, and business generally in the down town part of the city came to a standstill. The mounted police rode along the lines, pressing back the excited people and making lanes through which the fleeing persons from the Western Union and the evening Mail buildings were taken to places of safety.

The Gold and Ticker service was interrupted by the exodus from the Western Union headquarters, and this further impeded business in the Wall Street district.

The offices of the Associated Press are situated in the Western Union building, but the Associated Press service was not interrupted. The firemen cut away a number of Western Union cables, but, fortunately, none of them contained any of the Associated Press leased wires.

The presses of the Evening Mail were soaked with water and put out of commission temporarily.

A ten-foot court separates the building in which the fire originated from the annex of the Western Union building. As the fire burst through the rear of the paint store is swept up this natural flue, and licked in the windows facing upon it. The Western Union fire hose was coupled up and the employes of the building assisted the firemen in getting streams into the threatened rooms. These were soaked with water, and it is probable that a good many records are destroyed.

A third alarm brought dozens of fire engines to the scene, and for two blocks around the fire an engine was coupled to every hydrant. Traffic on Broadway, Church, Fulton, Dey and other adjacent thoroughfares was suspended.

Thousands of persons were packed behind the fire lines, the crowd reaching back through City Hall square in a solid set of humanity. St. Paul's churchyard, which faces the burned building, was also filled with spectators. All the employes of the several large office buildings contiguous to the fire were dismissed, and hundreds of hatless girls congregated on the sidewalks, many of them hysterical.

The firemen made every effort to keep the flames away from a fireworks establishment, which is separated from the burning paint store by a narrow, vacant lot, on which a building had just been demolished.

The fire was brought under control at 2:25, though the flames were still burning fiercely on the lower floor of the building.

FOUR TO LEAVE IN AUGUST.

Transports Will Take Regiments to Relieve Those in Philippines.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—Four army transports are scheduled to leave San Francisco during August for Manila. They are the Warren, Crook, Buford and Logan. The trips are made necessary in order to have in the Philippines the regiments destined for duty as a relief of other commands, the tour of duty of which in the islands has expired.

Army transport Kilpatrick, running between Newport News, Va., and Havana, will be taken off the line during the next two months for repairs. She will be succeeded by the Sumner.

Steamers Reported.

SIASCONSET, Mass., Aug. 5.—Steamer Kronland, from Antwerp and Dover for New York, was 90 miles east of Nantucket lightship at 9 o'clock this morning. She will probably dock at 7:30 a. m. Tuesday.

SABLE ISLAND, Nova Scotia, Aug. 5.—Steamer Kronprinz Wilhelm, from Bremen, Southampton and Cherbourg for New York, was in wireless communication with the Marconi station here when 220 miles southeast of this port, at 5:40 o'clock this morning. She will probably dock at 7:30 p. m. Tuesday.

SABLE ISLAND, Nova Scotia, Aug. 5.—Steamer Carmania, from Liverpool and Queenstown for New York, was reported 200 miles southeast of this point at 7 o'clock this morning, by wireless telegraph. She will probably dock 7:30 a. m. Wednesday.

READY TO PROTECT ALL EUROPEANS.

Casablanca to Be Bombarded if Attack Is Renewed.

French Cruiser Answers Appeal on Moroccan West Coast.

TANGIER, Morocco, Aug. 5.—The latest advices from Casablanca say that most of the hostile Moorish riflesmen surrounding the town have retired, after a bloody fight with the natives inside.

Signals have been arranged by which French cruiser Galilee will bombard the native quarter of Casablanca in the event of a renewal of the attacks upon Europeans.

French cruiser Du Chayle has gone to Mazagan, off the west coast of Morocco, in answer to the appeals of Europeans there, who reported that the natives are greatly excited and that it is feared that there will be a duplication of the recent massacre at Casablanca.

Advices from Rabat, West coast of Morocco, under the date of August 1, were received here today, and reported the situation there as disquieting. The neighboring tribes were moving round the town, and the French residents declared that unless a warship was sent to Rabat they would leave that place, as the number of troops guarding the town was inadequate.

FRENCH FORCE FOR MOROCCO.

Cruisers and Transports Will Take Infantry, Artillery and Cavalry.

PARIS, Aug. 5.—The expeditionary force to be sent to Morocco by the French government will consist of two battalions of Algerian sharpshooters and a battalion of the foreign legion, making a total of 2,460 infantry; two batteries of artillery, a detachment of 300 light cavalry and half a squadron of Spahis Algerian cavalry in the French service. Part of these troops will be embarked at Oran on cruisers, and the remainder at Algiers on transports.

PEARY PREPARES FOR THREE YEARS.

The Roosevelt Ready to Start in a Few Days.

Arctic Explorer Talks of His Crew and General Plans.

PORTLAND, Me., Aug. 5.—Commander Robert E. Peary left at noon today for New York, in response to a telegram stating that the repairs on the Roosevelt have been completed and the ship will be ready in a few days to start on the expedition to the North Pole.

In an interview Commander Peary said: "From New York I shall go direct to Sydney, Cape Breton, where I shall coal the ship. There will be no stops along the way, as I have no time to lose.

"My crew this time will be practically the same as on the last trip. Captain Robert Bartlett is to command the Roosevelt; John Murphy, my old boatswain, is to be with me again, I am to have Wardwell, my old chief engineer; Ross G. Marvin of Bucksport is to be my assistant, and he will be the only Maine member of the party. I am to have a new surgeon. There are several applications for the position, but as yet no one has been chosen. I will settle that when I get to New York. I am leaving the getting together of the greater number of the crew to Captain Bartlett."

Asked if he expected to reach the pole this time, Peary said: "A man who has had any experience in the North knows that to say that he will do a certain thing up there is madness. No man knows what he can accomplish in the Arctic until he has actually done it. I feel then I am as familiar with that part of the world as any man, but I would not make any circumstances make a prediction of what I will do. I have learned many lessons from my other trips, especially my last one, and I shall profit by all this experience. Whether I shall find the North Pole or not is a question which will not be answered until I have either reached it or failed. I am going to prepare to make every effort to reach it, however. It should require 14 months to make the trip and return to the United States. If, however, I do not succeed next summer, I shall stay over another year. That summer I shall make another trial. If then I do not succeed I shall try a third time, one year later. I am taking along everything for a three years' trip, and it will not be because I am not prepared or do not try if I do not succeed in attaining the object for which I am going."

Asked if he should ever try again, if not successful this time, Commander Peary said: "The newspapers have credited me with saying that I shall never make the attempt again. I do not say whether I shall or not. Future circumstances and conditions only will govern me in that.

"I am already over three weeks late in starting, and it is very possible that before I finally get away from New York it will be four weeks. From Sydney I shall go to Cape York, which point I expect this year to reach in ten days from Sydney. From there I shall carry out the program which has already been published. I do not know for sure whether Mrs. Peary will accompany me to Sydney. She may, and she may not."

Asked if he had ample funds for carrying out the expedition, Commander Peary replied: "I will say one thing, and that is that the delays in the repairs on the boilers of the Roosevelt have been, and are now, worrying me a great deal more than the money with which to finance the expedition."

Commander Peare appeared today to be in rugged health, and is full of enthusiasm for the trip upon which he is about to start, and whose outcome means so much to him, to the United States, to whom the honor of discovery would belong, and to the world at large.

SPAIN PAYS AMERICAN DEBT.

Arranges to Settle $600,000 Claim Acknowledged in 1834.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—Spain has just recognized a debt of long standing to the United States. The Spanish Cortes has passed an act directing the payment to the United States of a debt acknowledged by Spain in a convention of February 17, 1834.

The claim is for damages inflicted upon American commerce. The certificates of indebtedness were delivered to the United States and interest paid thereon at the rate of five per cent until 1878, when Secretary Evarts called attention to the unpaid principal and the law creating the sinking fund out of which the principal was paid. The matter since then has been a subject of legislative deliberation in the Spanish Cortes. The amount involved is approximately $600,000.

MARTOOGESSIAN UNFROCKED.

Blackmailing Armenian Priest Degraded, and Loses Name of Levont.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—Father Levont Martoogessian, the Armenian priest, now in the Tombs, charged with having sent blackmailing threats to rich Armenian merchants, and who is suspected of knowing much of the plans for the killing of Hovhannes S. Tavshanjian, has been unfrocked. Archbishop Sarjian, head of the Armenian church in this country, today received a cablegram from Mugerditch, the Cathlikos, or Pope, of all Armenians. The cablegram was in French, and was sent from Etchmiadzin, Caucasia. Translated the cablegram reads: "Sarjian, Archbishop of New York: According to your demands, we have degraded Martoogessian."

The degradation of the priest will also mean that he will lose his given name, that of Levont. This was bestowed upon him, after an Armenian Church custom, when he took up the priesthood. Levont was the name of one of the most illustrious of Armenian religious dignitaries. Martoogessian will have to take up his old given name of Garabed.

It was learned today that the defense of Father Martoogessian for the charge against him will be that he collected the money in good faith, to be forwarded for patriotic and charitable purposes by Arzouoian.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—Another murderous assault was added tonight to the record of recent crime against defenseless women and girls. Tonight's victim was Miss Ellen Bulger, a woman of middle age, who was attacked in her apartments in Bronx, beaten cruelly and left in a helpless state. The woman was removed to a hospital, where it was found that her skull had apparently been fractured, her face and hands lacerated and her body otherwise bruised.

There were evidence of a furious fight. From what the police were able to immediately learn from her, she was surprised by a smooth-faced stranger, perhaps 40 years old. He was coatless, and wore an outing shirt and dark trousers. He escaped.

Just before Miss Bulger was assaulted George Kestner, a Russian, charged with attempted assault upon an 8-year-old girl, was set upon by a crowd of men and all but killed. The clothes were torn from his body and he was taken to a station house wrapped in a blanket.

Another mob set upon Hylo Saloda, an Indian palmist, who was similarly accused, and only the timely intervention of police reserves saved him from summary punishment.

DEATH OF ST. GAUDENS.

Great Sculptor and Artist Expires at Cornish, N. H.

CORNISH, N. H., Aug. 3.—The long and brave but unequal struggle which St Augustus Gaudens, LL. D., L. H. D, has made for his life came to an end at ten minutes before 7 o'clock tonight, when he succumbed to the general breaking down of his system, traceable in part to nervous dyspepsia, of which he had long been a victim.

Mr. St. Gaudens was operated upon last year for a minor trouble, and although he obtained temporary relief his health continued poor and grew worse steadily. As he grew weaker he had to be assisted to his studio, but he persisted in making his visits daily until his enfeebled frame rebelled and would not permit him to do so any longer. Since the middle of July he has been obliged to remain in bed. During the past month his decline has been rapid and it is thought he felt his death was approaching, for until the first part of July he visited his studio nearly every day and directed personally, while suffering intense pain, the work of his assistants.

Last Wednesday night his condition was such that it was feared he would not live until morning. He rallied, however, but continued in a weak state, or two days before his death he was unconscious the greater part of the time, and his physician saw that it was but a question of hours before the end.

HISTORICAL EXHIBITS.

With the recent completion of the fire-proof History building at the Jamestown Exposition, and the installation of the priceless exhibits, representing more than 12 states of the union, and several of the leading historical societies of the country, the Ter-Centennial has added to its already extensive list of exhibits the most interesting and valuable collection of a historic nature ever brought together in this country. The exhibit in general, which includes collections by the Colonial Dames of America, The Daughters of the American Revolution, the Episcopal church and the states of Virginia, West Virginia, Rhode Island, Vermont, New Jersey, North Carolina and Massachusetts, is replete with relics, souvenirs and antiques of American history from its very earliest stages, and is in itself an education.

The Pennsylvania state historical exhibit, under the supervision of Albert Cook Myers, is perhaps the most conspicuous and handsome collection in the History building, although every display has its own special features. In this exhibit the history of the state of Pennsylvania is depicted by a series of beautiful oil paintings, from its settlement on through the Revolution, including some famous old Dutch portraits. A large, full length portrait of William Penn is the centre of a handsome portrait collection. A set of lay figures, dressed in the various costumes of the different religious sects which have existed in the state from time to time, is another feature of the exhibit.

The Colonial Dames exhibit is also one of the interesting and valuable collections in the History building. Arranged in separate exhibits of the states represented, the collection has many famous portraits, colonial relics and documents. A portrait of Alexander Spottswood and two paintings of Gilbert Stuart being the most noted in the collection. The exhibit also includes a wonderful display of old colonial silverware and silver relics, among which is a silver crown, worn by the Queen of the Pamunkey Indians, presented to her by King Charles II of England. The portraits of the Calvert family, famous in Maryland history, are also in this collection, loaned by Mrs William Reed of Baltimore.

The exhibit by the Daughters of the American Revolution includes a notable collection of documents and relics, prominent among the later being a display of dolls of the Revolutionary period.

The Episcopal Church exhibit is most interesting, consisting of a collection of rare old silver services from the historical churches of the country.

The Virginia state historical exhibit, which has been installed under the auspices of the state library and the Virginia Historical Society, is in charge of William C. Torrence, bibliographer of the state library at Richmond. This exhibit is valued at $750,000 and is made up largely of state documents, dating from the earliest period of Virginia history up to a recent date, including some of the rarest old documents of the House of Burgesses, and some of the most valuable state papers relative to the Civil war.

North and South Carolina have both installed most creditable exhibits, the most interesting feature of the former being an original portrait of Theodosia Burr, the beautiful daughter of Aaron Burr, one of the most romantic characters in American History.

The feature of the New Jersey state historical collection is the display of fire arms, demonstrating the development along that line of manufacture in the state of New Jersey, from the old Revolutionary flint-lock to the present modern Springfield magazine rifle.

A reproduction in miniature of the Blennerhassett mansion, famous in history as the birthplace of the Burr-Blennerhassett conspiracy, is a feature of the West Virginia exhibit.

Last, but not least, is the exhibit of the state of Ohio, which is perhaps the most original and unique historical collection ever presented by any exposition. The exhibit, which was installed by the Archæological and Historical Society of Ohio, is a complete display of relics and methods of burial of the mound builders. One of the most interesting features is a reproduction in miniature of one of the famous mounds of the state, showing a cross-section view. The mound, which is 160 feet in length, 90 in breadth and 20 in height, was erected by the mound builders as a charnal house, a place for the cremation of their dead. The miniature is so accurate in every detail that many of the curious methods of these people of a totally unknown period are shown. A pre-historic pearl necklace valued at $10,000 is but one of a collection of most interesting trinkets and relics included in this exhibit.

This passing review of the History building at the Jamestown Exposition serves to give only an idea of the real significance and interest of the exhibits which are there installed, and a visit and inspection of that beautiful structure is the only means of appreciating the wealth of historic knowledge displayed.

TRACING IT BACK.

"Yes, when I was naughty."

"And did her mamma whip her when she was little?"

"Yes, Tommy."

"And was she whipped when she was little?"

"Yes."

"Well, who started it, anyway?"

GUARDIANS OF OUR COASTS.

Sufficient Fortresses, but Lack of Equipment and Men.

Mine Fields Necessary in Channels—Congress Provides $375,000 for Submarine Defense.

Rene Bache's "Grim Guardians of Our Coast" in the July number of the Technical World Magazine is a particularly interesting article, and of more than ordinary interest to a garrison town like Newport, where fortifications are so common that as a matter of fact few people know anything about their details. The guarding of the coast line of a country is a huge undertaking. Five forth now stand at the entrance of Narragansett Bay and more are needed to complete the defense. The more interest Congress takes in the matter of fortifying the coast the more the city will benefit, for it means so much more in the way of garrisons to do business with the merchants of the city. The article referred to is as follows:

Fifty million dollars, according to the estimates of the War Department, are needed to complete our system of fortifications for coast defense. It is an urgent demand because, if we were attacked at the present time by Japan, or Germany, or any other alert and aggressive power, we should be likely to suffer terribly for lack of preparedness in this respect.

So far as forts go we are excellently provided, but there is an insufficiency of guns, an alarming want of trained artillerymen to shoot them, and a serious deficiency in certain indispensable apparatus for the management of the batteries—not to mention an almost total absence of the submarine equipments, especially for mine-fields, which are required for the protection of our seaports.

In a strategic sense the weak point of the United States is its enormous length of coast-line. From the sea we are vulnerable in a great many spots, and on this account the creation of adequate defensive works for guarding our numerous and widely-scattered harbors is necessarily a costly affair. In the building of the fortifications requisite for this purpose no less a sum than $72,750,000 has been expended within the last few years, but, as above stated, the system is as yet incomplete with respect to its equipment, and there is a woeful lack of men behind the guns.

The gigantic scale on which our system of coast defenses has been established is realized very imperfectly by the people at large. On the Atlantic shore-line alone we have no fewer than 46 modern fortresses. The Gulf has 12 and the Pacific coast 15 forts. All of these are provided with high-power guns (though in some instances the number of the latter is insufficient as yet), and are up-to-date in all respects, so far as their construction is concerned. By the expenditure of the $50,000,000 already mentioned every one of them can be made practically impregnable.

A fortress of this kind, of the highest class, costs about $5,000,000, of which amount rather more than half is spent for guns. It consists of a series of concrete-lined pits, called emplacements, below the level of the ground, in which the guns stand on their carriages. The pits are placed at considerable distances from each other, in order to offer as poor a target as possible, and as near as practicable to the water's edge. From the water, whether it be river, channel or harbor, a grassy slope extends back to the pits. Beneath the grass and several feet of earth is an inclined plane of concrete; but from the viewpoint of an approaching vessel the works are altogether invisible, their outward aspect being merely that of a well-kept bit of landscape.

Such a fort may have 24 guns—12 large ones and an equal number of smaller calibre. The big ones, of 12-inch and 14-inch calibre, intended primarily for attacking battleships, are placed two in each pit. Those of less size, three-inch quick firers, which are mainly for covering and protecting the mine-fields off-shore, occupy two emplacements, six in each. All of which formidable defensive equipment is reinforced by 16 mortars, in similar pits, some distance in the rear.

Now, to give a notion of the tremendous character of these weapons, it should be explained that a 12-inch rifle gun is 49 feet long, weighs 57 tons, and with a charge of 520 pounds of powder, throws a 1,000-pound projectile a distance of 13 miles. Be it remembered, incidentally, that a ship is invisible from the water's edge when it is only seven miles away, owing to the curvature of the earth. Such a weapon does effective and accurate work at 12,000 yards. It has armor-piercing shells containing heavy charges of a high explosive, so as to burst on impact.

The mortars are even more effective than the big guns. Altogether different from the old-style weapon so called, they are, in fact, short rifled cannon eight feet in length and of 12-inch calibre, discharging cylindro-conical armor-piercing projectiles weighing 1,000 pounds and loaded with a high explosive. One such projectile landing upon the deck of a warship will go far toward putting her out of action. The mortars are set back at a distance from the shore because they do better work at long ranges, being fired into the air at an angle of 45 degrees—notwithstanding which curve of trajectory the projectiles reach their mark with utmost precision.

It is out of the question for warships, no matter how powerful, to attack with success a fortification of this kind. In order to harm it, they would be obliged literally to batter down the landscape. Meanwhile the defenders are invisible, and the guns (being on disappearing carriages) rise into view only at the moment when they discharge their projectiles. As for the mortars, it may be added that frightful execution was done at Port Arthur by the Japanese with weapons of this type, though they were of smaller size than those here described, throwing shells that weighed only 500

HOURS OF TORTURE THEN QUICK RELIEF.

Annoying itch caused by summer rashes, prickly heat, mosquito bites, hives, etc. can be instantly relieved.

Don't suffer another instant from the itch of hives, nettle rash, mosquito bites, poison ivy, etc. Don't rub or scratch as that only makes the itch worse, and may result in something serious.

There is a quick and sure relief for all forms of skin disease and itch. D. D. D. Prescription a purely vegetable preparation and only known positive cure for eczema and other skin diseases is equally valuable for summer rashes, and when applied to the itching skin gives instant relief, takes away all irritation, soothes and cools the skin and permanently cures the itch. Caution about the Use and Selection of Spectacles

"Persons having normal vision will be able to read this print at a distance of 14 inches from the eyes with ease and comfort; also will be able to read it with each eye separately. If unable to do so your eyes are defective and should have immediate attention. When the eyes become tired from reading or sewing, or if the letters look blurred and run together, it is a sure indication that glasses are needed. The lenses sold in the cheap goods are of unequal density and have imperfectly formed surfaces. Continued use of these poorer lenses will result in positive injury from the constant strain upon the muscles of accommodation to supply the defects in the glass."

I use first quality lenses only and have all makes eyeglass centers but the so-easy is the glass.

Awarding of the FORD AUTOMOBILE
AUGUST 3, 1907.

At 12 o'clock midnight, on the first floor of the Westminster street shop of the Hall & Lyon Co., in the presence of Edward P. Tobie, representing the Providence Journal and Percy Shires, representing the Providence Tribune, Sheriff Franklin B. Ham and Dr. W. H. Peters, the Ford automobile was awarded.

The selections were made by William Davis, a Postal District messenger boy, living at rear 749 North Main street, who was summoned for the purpose.

THREE NUMBERS WERE ANNOUNCED—

THE FIRST 573,351

Being the number to the holder of which the Ford automobile will be given if claimed by the holder of the number on or before September 3d, 1907.

THE SECOND 404,067

Being the number to the holder of which the Ford automobile will be given if claimed on September 4th, 1907, should the holder of the first ticket not claim the automobile on before September 3d, 1907.

THE THIRD 54,647

Being the number to the holder of which the Ford automobile will be given if claimed on September 5th, 1907, providing it is not claimed within the dates specified by the holders of the first two numbers.

GUARDIANS OF OUR COASTS.

pounds. They are destined to prove extremely formidable in the warfare of the future.

It is not going too far, then, to describe such fortresses, when they are fully and properly equipped, as impregnable—at all events to attack from the sea. To assail them by land would require a considerable military force such as could hardly be disembarked anywhere upon our shores. As a matter of fact, however, an enemy would not attempt to capture or destroy fortifications of the kind by naval operations, but would try to run past them. In this effort battleships might easily be successful, escaping very serious damage, and thus reach an unprotected inner harbor, like that of New York, from which point of vantage they could destroy a city or hold it to ransom.

This cannot be done if mine fields obstruct the channel. But, unfortunately, here is the very point in which our arrangements for the defense of our coast cities are weakest. Our military experts have devised the most admirable system of submarine mines in the world, but as yet it is almost wholly on paper. Should war break out with Japan, or with Germany, we should certainly be assailed without warning, and such prompt advantage might be taken of our helplessness in this respect as to decide the issue of the conflict against us before we had a chance to strike an effective blow. Think, for example, of the distressing position we should find ourselves in if half a dozen German battleships gained entrance to the harbor of New York! They might do hundreds of dollars' worth of damage in a few hours, unless we chose surrender as the disgraceful alternative.

According to the estimate of the War Department, only $3,466,322 would be required to provide mines and all incidental equipments for submarine defense for all of our harbors, from Portland, Maine, to Puget Sound. But Congress, which usually does its cheese-paring in the wrong place, has shown a reluctance to put all of this money under water. Thus, for the sake of saving so small a sum, the country has been placed in a perilous situation—the mischief lying in the circumstance that the requisite mines and other material demand a period of many months for their manufacture, while the men to handle them cannot be taught the art in less than a year. Are we to expect, forsooth! that the foe will give us a year to get ready before he swoops down upon us? Even of guns we yet lack 187 to complete the armament of our coast defenses.

Floating contact mines of the kind used by both belligerents at Port Arthur are, as shown by the experience of that campaign dangerous alike to friend and foe. The sort we employ are submarine torpedoes, anchored usually in lines across a channel and connected by wire cables with the shore, from which they may be exploded by electricity. With such an arrangement, the infernal machines may be rendered entirely harmless when not in use, or at will may be utilized with frightful destructiveness against hostile warships trying to run by. The entire mine field obstructing a harbor entrance is by this means controlled by a single operator through the medium of a series of push-buttons.

One method adopted for such purposes consists in laying off the water surface of the mine fields by careful survey, in a series of squares arranged like those of a checkerboard. Two telescopes on shore, a couple of miles apart, perhaps, can together fix the exact position of a vessel floating anywhere in the channel. These telescopes are electrically connected with two brass pointers which, in an underground chamber within the fort, move upon a map. The map, which represents the mine field, is likewise checkerboard, each numbered square of which corresponds to a surveyed square of the channel. Obeying the telescopes, the pointers meet exactly where the ship in view happens to be at the moment, and to explode the submarine torpedo nearest to her is simply a matter of pushing the right button.

Happily, Congress at last shows signs of being persuaded that something really must be done to remedy the deficiences already mentioned. It has provided $575,000 as a starter, for the purchase of mines and other apparatus for submarine defense. It has also created a new corps, to be called the torpedo artillery, which will attend to the business of operating such military contrivances. This corps is to consist of picked men, who shall have undergone a thorough course of instruction in all matters relating to subaqueous warfare, including the chemistry of explosives, electricity, and the management of automatic anchors, which last is a science in itself.

For some years past there has been in existence a well-equipped school of submarine warfare at Fort Totten, N. Y., where a limited number of graduates in these arts are turned out annually, both officers and enlisted men, the latter being thereupon assigned to various fortified posts along the seacoast. The method of training adopted is as practicable as possible, small steamers being used for planting mines and connecting the cables. The automatic anchors aforesaid are ingenious contrivances whereby the mines may be placed at any desired distance below the surface of the water. Occasionally, to make the thing seem real, a miniature battleship, put together by the men for the purpose, is blown up and into everlasting smithereens.

Now, Congress, in establishing the torpedo artillery, has provided for 5,023 additional men, who, when they have obtained the requisite training, will be a sufficient number to operate all of the submarine defenses of our harbors. This will require some years, and in the meantime, it is hoped, the balance of the money required for mines and other material will be appropriated. When these things have been accomplished, we shall have an effective first line of defense—a means of protection for our seaports so formidable that we shall have no reason to fear a sudden raid upon our coast by a powerful enemy. Within 48 hours after the first alarm of war every harbor will be completely mined—interposing an obstacle to invasion which no naval force, however strong, would attempt to pass.

There are now mounted in our seacoast fortifications 1,193 guns, including both great and small. Up to the first day of the present year two thirds of these formidable weapons were practically useless for lack of men to shoot them. Speaking in accurate figures, only 33 per cent were in commission and available for employment against a foe. Congress within the last few weeks has augmented the force of coast artillery sufficiently to arm 38 per cent of the guns—leaving only 62 per cent unutilizable in case of emergency. This is an improvement, but one may well ask, "Where is the wisdom in economy of this kind?"

The number of artillerymen required to man our coast defenses is 40,000, including the new torpedo artillery and the other additional men above mentioned. Congress has now provided for 20,000—that is to say, one half of the necessary force. But peace reigns at present, and under such circumstances it is hard to persuade the average legislator for the nation to vote money for military preparedness. Efforts to educate him on the subject are not attended with flatter-

REAL FISHING.

The Kind that Gives the Most Sport is Found in the Clear Waters of the Pacific Ocean.

[Chicago Post.]

For real fishing—the kind that joys the heart and stirs the blood—drop your line in the Pacific Ocean, just a few hundred miles sou'-sou'west of San Diego, Cal., where the water is still and clear, fishermen scarce, and the fish are fighters. That is the advice of Lieutenant E. F. Eckhardt, U. S. N., in charge of Uncle Sam's recruiting office in the federal building.

Sport? Well, yes. One prepares for trouble when the line goes taut. An occasional spill is to be expected in lifting the prize over the gunwale, and if there are sharks snoping around with an eye for dinner, that adds a bit of spice to the game.

"Yes, I have fished a little in those waters," said Lieutenant Eckhardt, "but I have never boasted of my exploits. I never had more than ordinary luck. It was no uncommon matter to take in 40 or 50 yellowtails and Spanish mackerel in a forenoon. It was really no trouble at all getting a nibble, but sometimes drawing in the line furnishes some fun."

The lieutenant puffed thoughtfully at his cigar and gazed out of the window.

"I was down there last year on the cruiser Chicago. We had been lying in Magdalena Bay for a spell, and life isn't very strenuous down there, so we turned our minds to fishing and little trips out into deep water, lowered some boats, and often made a day of it.

"There are some fairly good-sized fish to be hooked in that region. Rock cod average about 45 pounds, while sea bass do better—perhaps 75 is close to the average. The yellowtails are small fellows, not more than 25 pounds, as a rule, but it takes a stout line to hold them.

It was there that perhaps the most singular happening took place that I recall. There were eight of us in a small boat at the time, and I had a rock cod on my line. I could see him long before I succeeded in drawing him in, for the water was clear as crystal, and his weight I judged to be not less than 80 pounds—an uncommonly large one. I afterwards verified my guess, but that is a little ahead of the story.

"He gave us a hard run. You see, a reel isn't used for that kind of fishing. We run the line through our bare hands, but take the precaution of making the end fast to the boat. The line is in diameter about equal to a clothesline, but for all that we never let it run 'way out, for then a sudden jerk would break it. I knew that my catch was a fighter from the way the line cut my hands and slid through when my fish made sudden dashes.

"At length, however, after making things interesting for a spell, I found that my fish was conquered, and the line I drew in when he slackened grew steadily over that which I paid out when he tugged. The fight was practically over, so far as that fellow was concerned.

"Without knowing it, however, I had a competitor for that catch. I had brought the cod within a short distance of the side, and the other men were standing ready with hooks which are used in getting the catch aboard to prevent a spill, when I caught sight of a shark making for the fish I had caught.

"With no intention of relinquishing the prize I had fought for and fairly won, I drew in recklessly. Springing to my feet when the last few lengths were reached, I brought it up with a jerk that nearly sent us topsy-turvy. But the shark arrived at the same time. As the fish left the water the shark's jaws snapped and grabbed it by the middle. The shark's momentum was such that he leaped out of the water at least six feet, and the men who had been waiting to help me land my catch drove their pointed instruments into the shark instead. In a very short space of time a good many things contrived to happen, but fortunately for us the shark got away.

"If the men had succeeded in carrying out their impulse our boat would have been demolished in a twinkling. The shark got away, but we shipped a cargo of water that nearly swamped us."

Lieutenant Eckhart tossed away his cigar, that had gone out in the course of the narration.

"There were eight witnesses to that shark's action or I would have had difficulty in making the other fellows believe that I was telling a true fish story. Then there was the fish. The shark had let go when the men struck at him, but the mark of his teeth remained. I have had the opportunity to observe a number of sharks, but that is the first one I ever saw try to take a man's property almost out of his hands."

THE SOCIALIST'S "DIVIDE."

[Wall Street Journal.]

A wealthy patron of a well known brokerage house returned the other day from an extensive tour of foreign countries and came into the customers' room with an air of one who had a confession to make. "I have just come back," he said, "from a trip over Europe and find myself a confirmed Socialist."

"Then," said the head of the firm, "you are prepared to divide with your associates that portion of wealth which you have accumulated in the course of your business career?"

"Oh, no," replied the returned traveler, "I'm not prepared to do anything of the kind. I expect the other fellow to divide with me."

This is the secret of the Socialist propaganda. The other fellow is to do all the dividing, and the Socialist is the only one who is to receive dividends without having to put up any capital from which to get the returns.

SARCASM.

[Somerville Journal.]

Let us talk about the weather!
Let us tell the neighbors whether
We would have it cold or hot.
Let us criticise the seasons,
And at length give all our reasons
Why we'd have it what it's not.

For it is so entertaining,
On a day when it is raining,
To hear any one repine;
And on days when it is pleasant
Nearly everybody present
Likes to hear you say: "How fine!"

So let's talk about the weather,
Let us tell the neighbors whether
We are satisfied or not.
Such informing conversation
Causes general elation,
And it helps the world a lot!"

HEIMWEH.

[J. B. Kenyon, in the Atlantic.]

Ah, could it be once more ere life's wan close!
That I might climb the long ancestral hill
Where the smooth slope dips to the shattered mill,
And the shrunk brook amid its alders flows;
Feel the soft wind that down the valley blows;
Hear in the dewy hush the whip-poor-will
Thresh the gray silence, and through evening's chill
Breathe once again the scene of thyme and rose!

Then would great peace flood all my avid breast;
Welcome would be the dusk of twilight skies,
And as a lute bird hastens to her nest
Through deepening gloom, with little happy cries,
So should I seek the covert of my rest,
And give to death my sleep-consenting eyes.

FANCIES.

When he's at home he yearns each day
To quit the place; to go away
Where purling streams or breakers white
Make restful music, day and night.
And so he takes
The train and makes
A bee line for some rural site.

But when the sunburn strikes his arms
And noisy revelry alarms
His slumber that seems all too brief
And fierce mosquitoes cause him grief,
He packs his grip
And makes the trip
To town once more, with great relief.

PERSONALS.

....Amalie Materna, who, since her retirement from the stage in 1894, has been devoting her time to giving instruction in singing, celebrated her sixtieth birthday in Vienna July 10. In congratulating her, the Freie Presse quotes letters written to her by Wagner in 1876 and 1882, in which he praises rapturously her performances of Brunnhilde, Kundry and Elizabeth, and speaks of her as "the most loyal of all the loyal ones."

....Christiania was aglow with flags and bunting Saturday, and there was much popular rejoicing over the thirty-fifth anniversary of the birth of King Haakon. Addresses of congratulation were received from cities and towns throughout Norway, and to these were added the felicitations of all the sovereigns of Europe. The greetings of the latter were conveyed to the royal palace by the diplomatic representatives, who were received in person by the king.

....A well-known Paisley manufacturer, Mr. James Coats, has established in recent years in numerous villages throughout the Highlands small but useful libraries, which are supplemented periodically with fresh donations of up-to-date literature. Mr. Coats's generosity, however, is extended in still more novel fashion by sending a skilled nealist to travel throughout the Highlands, testing the eyes of those with defective and failing sight and furnishing them with spectacles free of cost. In one district, that of West Sutherlandshire, no fewer than 500 pairs of spectacles were thus distributed recently.

....Judge Lemuel Leltaron Holmes of the Massachusetts superior court, one of the foremost lawyers of southern Massachusetts, died at his summer home in Mattapoisett Sunday, after a brief illness. Comparatively few know of his illness, and many even of his intimate friends had no warning that a fatal termination was imminent. He had occupied a prominent place in his profession for more than 30 years, and was regarded as a worthly forman by seasoned old practitioners at the bar at a time of life when most young lawyers are fast winning their spurs.

....Although she is the only one of her sex whom the French government has authorized to wear masculine attire, Mme. Dieulafoy of Paris is anything but a radical. The very qualities which have caused her to don the apparel of a man seem to have made her one of the most feminine of women. She was sufficiently womanly to attract Marcel Dieulafoy, nor was she unwilling to enter the bonds of matrimony, even with the "obey" clause included. She does not want to vote, and has nothing but a smile for the work of the suffragettes. Mme. Dieulafoy was educated in the Convent of the Assumption in Paris. She is 47 years old, and has worn the garments of the other sex since 1881. She is exceedingly particular about her dress—that is to say, her suits—and always looks as though she had stepped out of a fashion plate. Her hair is cut short and parted on the side.

....Speaking of Josef Tichatschek, whose one hundredth birthday was celebrated in musical circles July 11, a Prague paper says: "He was the original Wagner singer. He was the one who laid the foundation for Wagner's great triumphs. As the name indicates, he was a Bohemian, born in 1807, the son of poor weavers at Weckelsdorf. He began his career as a chorus boy in the Benedictine cloister near his home and, like many other great singers, he studied medicine, but deserted the Vienna University to become a member of the Royal Opera. In 1838 he went to Dresden, where he won his laurels, and where he remained in active service for 22 years. In October, 1842, the first performance of 'Rienzi' took place at Dresden. Wagner was a struggling musician in Paris at the time and the performance won for Wagner the directorship of the Dresden opera. From that day forward there was a brotherly friendship between the master and the singer, which lasted until Wagner died."

ST. GAUDENS.

The death of Augustus St. Gaudens removes one of the greatest of the world's artists, generally acknowledged to be the greatest American sculptor. He was born in Ireland, his father being a Frenchman and his mother of Irish birth. Brought to this country when six months old, practically his whole life was spent in America, with the exception of the years occupied in study in Paris and Rome.

He began his career as a cameo-cutter in New York and the effects of this work are shown in his later sculpture. After returning to this country in 1863 he began to advance in public favor and his works have been of the most prominent character. His first important commission after reaching America was that for the decorative chancel of St. Thomas's Protestant Episcopal Church, New York city. During the next few years he gave much attention to portraiture and succeeded with this branch of work, to the delight of the critics and the pleasure of his friends. His long succession of great achievements began at that time and have included the Puritan, on the Chapin monument, at Springfield, Mass.; the Adams monument, at Washington; Diana, on the Madison Square Garden, New York; statues of Lincoln and General Logan, at Chicago; Peter Cooper, General Sherman and Admiral Farragut, New York, and the Shaw memorial, Boston.

At the time of his death he was at work on a statue of the late Phillips Brooks, to be placed in front of Trinity Church, Boston; a Lincoln statue, to be placed at the entrance to the John Crerar library, Chicago; caryatide for the Albright museum, Buffalo; a bust of John Hay, a statue of William C. Whitney and the allegorical figures for the Boston Public Library. Before his death he had arranged for the completion of these, the designs and models having in each case been worked out by the sculptor, and being in such a condition that his associates and employes can carry out in full his conceptions.

While there is a difference of opinion regarding St. Gaudens's best individual work, the Shaw memorial in Boston is held in especially high esteem, and generally regarded as a beautiful work of art, alone entitling its sculptor to high fame.

GRAFT IN PARTY POLITICS.

The latest exposure of municipal corruption and the most recent wail against graft in city politics and administration come from New York, where an investigation into the affairs of the borough of Manhattan has shown that only a single officer has been free from the taint of mal-administration and the indictment of "graft, waste and corruption" has been brought against every official of the borough with that single exception. This is municipal wrong-doing by wholesale, and it is not strange that the honest people of New York who want its affairs managed in a creditable and correct manner are considerably discouraged at the revelation made of the extent to which fraud has been practiced upon the people in the government of that particular section of the city. There is a feeling, too, that if this one borough is so honeycombed with graft and corruption probably others, if not all, are tainted in the same manner, if not to the same extent, and that honest government is almost unknown in the city.

The mistake has been made in New York as in other municipalities of believing that a city government by party is possible without the danger of dishonesty and graft. Mayor McClellan thought he could work out reforms in his city through the medium of Tammany, but has now discovered what had been learned in some places long ago, that it will not do to rely upon party organizations to carry out reform administrations in municipalities, that "graft, waste and corruption" almost inevitably follow, that a better way to work out reforms is by a reform government, free from party alliances and independent of the politicians. In theory perhaps city administration can be maintained honestly by party, but in practice it is found that this is generally impossible and the theory must be abandoned if there is a real desire for good government.

American cities are gradually learning their lesson along this line, however, and New York has just taken a long stride in experience, which is always a good teacher, and has only to heed the warning it has received to advance to better things. The trouble in the case of some cities has been that they have been slow to adopt the lesson they have been taught and have continued to play with the fire which has burned them, by dallying with the dangerous elements of partisan municipal government, in the hope, if not the actual belief, that some good might still be brought out of partisan administration. But finally all which have really learned the lesson have come to the conclusion that it is folly to rely upon parties for good city government and have put that conclusion to the test by a complete overthrow of the corrupt interests and the election and appointment of men of worth and ability without regard to their partisan affiliations.

For this reason there is an encouraging as well as a discouraging side to this recent experience in the city of New York. The fact has been made plain there that a clean partisan municipal government is an impossibility and that reform must be wrought outside of party lines by men selected for other considerations than party affiliations and party service. It now only remains for Mayor McClellan and those associated with him to determine that they will have good city government at any cost, and to carry out that determination to the extent of turning out all those who have proved unreliable and dishonest and putting in their places men who can be trusted to manage the affairs of the city without the "graft, waste and corruption" which have marked the administration of the officers whose conduct has just been investigated and proved to have been dishonorable. If this result follows the exposure great good will have been accomplished by it and it will have been worth while stirring up the heap of corruption which has been found to have existed.

RAMESES II.

Professor Naville has reached the conclusion that Rameses II, commonly called the Great, was not a great man or a great king, except in respect to his vanity. Certainly he was also great in his impudence. He did not erect great monuments or buildings, or achieve great deeds, but he put his name on pretty nearly every great building in his country, and dotted Egypt with his statues, and gave the impression that he had done it all.

The discovery is not quite new. Egyptologists discovered some time ago that not all the buildings which bore his image and superscription were built by him. But it doesn't make any difference to Rameses that he has been found out. He could not impose on his own generation, because they knew those vast buildings and mighty public works were there before his time, and he cannot impose any longer on this generation, whose prying, inquisitive and suspicious scientists have exposed him. But between his generation and ours there were many generations and which he imposed, and that was a good deal; he imposed upon posterity longer than most monarchs have been able to do.

There is in the Egyptian museum of the University of Pennsylvania a block of stone upon which Egyptians carved an inscription, in doing which the workman made a mistake and cut a figure facing the wrong way. So he cleverly filled the cut with plaster and cut the figure over, facing the right way. Ages after he committed his little fraud, and when his inscription was removed to a climate which destroys almost everything—even complexions and voices—that bit of plaster crumbled out and the fraud was disclosed. But the workman doesn't care. Probably he would have been executed if it had been discovered in time, but it matters no more to him now than it matters to Rameses II what we think of him.

Many monarchs since the time of the Egyptian made their own ages or later ones think they were great when they were not, and history is about as destructive as our climate. How many of the great men of the present age will ever be known by name, except to archeologists, a thousand years hence?

Aroused by the frequency of automobile accidents in France, a society has been formed for protection against the abuses of automobiling. Its promoters do not intend to interfere with the legitimate enjoyment of the sport but will endeavor to have enacted more rigid speed laws and other safeguards. The new society will lend material support to the victims of irresponsible automobilists in their efforts to secure reparation. It is evident that there is need, not only in France but in the United States, for further restrictive laws which will prevent the fatalities from automobiling which have already become so frequent in this country as a result of reckless driving.

A large bill for champagne used on Georgia day at the Jamestown Exposition has been presented to Governor Hoke Smith for payment. As becomes the chief executive of a state which has recently adopted a stringent prohibition law, he has refused to pay the bill. The members of the commission will not admit any knowledge of the use of the champagne but Governor Smith desires to know who ordered the wine and, above all, who drank it.

According to the report of Commissioner of Corporations Herbert Knox Smith, the total dividends of the Standard Oil Company from 1882 to 1906 were in round numbers $552,000,000, while the net profits in excess of dividends were $240,000,000 and may have been $300,000,000. A little fine of $29,400,000 ought not to come hard on such a money-making concern.

New York has a law which taxes mortgages, and from this source was collected during the year ending July 1 nearly $5,000,000, which is equally divided between the state and the treasury of the localities in which the mortgages were placed. The mortgagor pays this money, by increased interest rates.

The announcement is sent out from Oyster Bay that President Roosevelt is not to visit Newport this summer. Few believed he would. A rumor of such a visit was printed in some newspapers, but it was never more than a rumor, without definite foundation in fact.

The rain Sunday morning did great good to vegetation, but there is still need for more.

OLD HOME WEEK THOUGHTS.

[Boston Transcript.]

The New York humorists who are poking fun at Boston's Old Home Week can hardly be blamed. The celebration certainly lends itself to satirical treatment. The Old Home idea, as originally incubated by the genial Governor Rollins and exploited for the benefit of the abandoned farms of New Hampshire, was a fine thought, a great scheme, a delightful discovery, a beneficent institution, and more to that effect. But transplanted to Boston all it grows less gracefully. The decorative chullition of bunting and electricity which the occasion has called forth has transformed the town into a diurnal and nocturnal riot of crazy color effects. The streaming influx of visitors has filled the streets with a mob of jostling sightseers.

It would be interesting to know what percentage of the invading horde is made up of genuine old-homers—native sons and daughters making a pious pilgrimage to the old home. It is a safe bet that the proportion of home-seekers is ridiculously small. The majority of the throng is composed of unmistakable aliens. They inquire the way to the State House and mistake King's Chapel for the town lockup. It would be interesting also to learn how many residents of the city have fled from home to escape the horrors of the week.

The invasion is, of course, a good thing for the hotels, saloons, shops, street fakirs, and "rubber-neck" wagons. But the celebration as a whole lacks the poetic significance which some would fondly attribute to it. Indeed, not the least of the afflictions which it has brought is the abundant crop of Old Home Week poetry. That is the most trying by-product of the week. Most of us will be heartily glad when it is all over. Speed the passing! And if we must repeat the painful experiment another year, let us not call it Old Home Week, for that is an abusive misnomer, but Strangers' Festival or Tourists' Roundup.

THE TYPE ALWAYS BLAMED.

Among Clyde Fitch's amusing collection of scrapbooks there is one devoted to typographical errors. The noted playwright showed this column to a reporter recently, and the young man copied some extracts from it.

One item concerned a dance. The word "brunier" was misprinted, with this deplorable result:

"There were no lonier ladies present than the Mayor's daughters, and this fact was further emphasized by the perfect fit of the sheperdess costumes they wore."

A country paper, after telling how a cow got in front of a train, said:

"As the safest course under the circumstances, the engineer put on full steam, dashed into the cow, and literally cut it into two calves."

A New York society editor, misprinting the word "chill," published this statement:

"Mrs. Astor was unavoidably absent from the reception, being kept at home by a bad child."

A political editorial which should have said, "The masses believed him," said instead: "Them asses believed him."

Supporting a candidate for the mayoralty, a country editor wrote:

"Mr Smith is also renowned for his great veracity and enormous capacity for work, and you will always find him, even under adverse circumstances full of good spirits."

This paragraph appeared in next day's paper:

"Mr. Smith is also renowned for his great voracity and enormous capacity for pork, and you will always find him even under adverse circumstances, full of good spirit."

THE WAY FIREWORKS ARE MADE

[Rene Bache in Technical World Magazine.]

The most solitary person in the world during working hours is the maker of the roman candles. He occupies an isolated cell, somewhat like that of an oldtime hermit, save that its precincts are more contracted, and no one comes near him while he is engaged in his patient toil. The wages he gets are high, but not by reason of the loneliness to which he is condemned; he is paid for the risks he is obliged to take.

The quarters occupied by this eremite artisan is a tiny house, which might almost be called a hut, with a floor space not more than six feet square. Standing by itself, at least 60 yards from the structure, the little building is of wood, of the simplest imaginable architecture. If it were to be blown up the financial loss would be almost nothing; a point of some importance, inasmuch as its diurnal tenant is obliged to use considerable quantities of explosives in the business which engages his attention. For a roman candle is a sort of magazine, or repeating gun, with a paper tube for a barrel and balls of fire for projectiles.

TO BALANCE.

[Philadelphia Inquirer.]

For more than a week the teacher had been giving lessons on the dog, and so when the inspector came down and chose that very subject there seemed every prospect of the class distinguishing itself on brilliant essays about our canine friend. Things were progressing quite satisfactorily, and the master was congratulating himself on the trouble he had taken, when, alas! a question was asked which made him tremble for the reputation of his scholars.

"Why does a dog hang his tongue out of his mouth?" asked the inspector.

"Yes, my boy?" he said, to a bright looking lad who held up his head, while the light of genius was in his eye.

"Please, sir," cried the pupil, "it's to balance his tail!"

And the teacher groaned in anguish.

AROUND RHODE ISLAND.

Agreements Terminating Most of the Frolic Chinese Cases.

Married on an Arch Over a Providence Street—Major Sweeny Retired.

Agreements which, on the part of the United States, were made by United States District Attorney Charles A. Wilson, were completed Saturday, which bring to a termination all but four of the so-called "Chinese cases," 21 in number, arising out of the adventurous voyage of schooner yacht Frolic from Newfoundland to Providence last fall, when 42 Chinese were smuggled ashore near that city. The litigation which grew out of this has involved the Treasury Department, the Department of Commerce and Labor and the Department of Justice more or less since last October. Seventeen of the Chinese were arrested and the order of deportation in their cases, given by Judge Arthur L. Brown in the circuit court, was affirmed by the United States circuit court of appeals. The prisoners defaulting their appearance, 17 cases against the bondsmen were brought by the district attorney, and these, after going to the circuit court of appeals, have now been disposed of by settlement on the part of the bondsmen, and an agreement by the government for the discharge of the bail. The United States receives $5,000 on the bail and the costs, and the Chinese are still subject, if found, to deportation and arrest. Two men have served jail sentences for aiding and abetting in the unlawful entrance to this country of these Chinese and two other men have had their cases nol prossed by the government. In all there have been four trials of the cases, the 17 Chinese being tried together. There are still four cases in the federal circuit court of appeals. The vessel has been condemned, sold and lost to the owners. The cost of the voyage of the Frolic has been considerably in excess of $10,000 to someone. Although it does not appear in record, it is generally supposed that the bondsmen have been recompensed by persons friendly to the escaped Chinese.

In the presence of the greatest throng which ever witnessed a wedding in Providence, Charles Irving Adams Saturday was married to Miss Nettie A. Pinkham on top of the great arch erected across Weybosset street by the Outlet Company for the Old Home Week Carnival, Rev. William Dixon, pastor of the Free Advent Church on Althea street, performing the ceremony on the lofty span, 50 feet above the street. Near by stood Miss May Pinkham, sister of the bride, as bridesmaid, while with the bridegroom was Alfred Landin, the best man. The four stood on a platform which had been erected at the south end of the arch, connected by a bridge with a fourth-floor window in the Outlet store. The bridal party faced the store window, while the clergyman stood a few feet in front of them, and recited the brief marriage service of his church. At exactly noon, as the bells and whistles of the city were sounding the hour, Rev. Mr. Dixon stepped forth, followed by the bridal party. As the five walked across the bridge, high above the street, a large graphophone in the winder set forth the strains of Mendelssohn's "Wedding March," and the air was filled with cheers from 20,000 throats. Then, when, after a few words, the minister placed the ring on the bride's finger, the applause was redoubled, and, as he raised his arms in final benediction over the couple he had made one, the great multitude below sent forth shout after shout, the tumult reaching the couple on their lofty platform and deepening the flush on the bride's cheeks. Thousands were massed into the store as the party came in, and men, women and children strove for a sight of the two who had the distinction of having been the principals in the most unique marriage in the city's history, but a circuitous route was taken advantage of, and the small party escaped the crowd, Mr. and Mrs. Adams driving at once to their future home.

Major Peter A. Sweeny, for eight years a major in the Second Regiment of infantry of the state military forces, was Saturday placed on the retired list by order of Governor James H. Higgins, commander-in-chief. This action was taken upon a formal request, made through military channels by Major Sweeney in writing, and endorsed by Brigadier General Herbert S. Tanner, who took occasion to refer in complimentary terms to Major Sweeney's long service in the militia. Major Sweeney has been prominently identified with the militia for a score of years, having been chosen major in the Second regiment June 20, 1899. At the regimental election June 20 of the present year, Captain Francis Cannon of Company A, Olneyville, was elected to succeed him.

Imprisoned in a third floor room, with the way to the stairs behind closed by flames and smoke, and carried in scanty attire down a ladder rushed up against the window by the firemen, while a large crowd cheered in the street below, Mrs. Beatrice Fitzgerald was the heroine of an exciting episode in a fire in the Park Hotel, Providence, which gave the department a lively few minutes early last evening. The rescue, however, furnished the feature of the affair, the fire being confined almost completely to the restaurant on the third floor, in which it originated, and being quickly brought under control. Charles R. Wyatt, a lieutenant of Truck 1, was the firefighter who climbed the ladder and carried the partially overcome young woman through the window and down to the street. Her husband, F. C. Fitzgerald of Boston, who was penned in with her, came down the ladder without help.

Mrs. Cecilia M. Mulligan, widow of Joseph Mulligan of Woonsocket, through her counsel, has sent a communication to Eugene A. Smart, chief of records of Winnesuket Tribe, No. 8, Improved Order of Red Men, complaining that the Woonsocket tribe of Red Men had refused to give her a decided answer as to whether it would pay her the death benefit of $100 to which she claims she is entitled by reason of her husband's death while a member of the organization. Her attorney in his letter, made formal demand for the death benefit. He said to a reporter that the organization had acknowledged the death of Mr. Mulligan, but had not, as yet, paid the claim of the widow. He said that the sending of the communication will be followed by the institution of a suit unless the money is paid. The communication was read at a meeting of the Woonsocket tribe, but no action was taken. A prominent member of the Red Men in Woonsocket says Mr. Mulligan had been a member of the Order two weeks when he died and had taken but one degree. He said the laws governing the order provide that a man must be a member in the chief's degree for a period of six months before a death benefit can be paid. Consequently Mr. Mulligan had not been in the order long enough to entitle his widow to a death benefit at the time of his death. Mr. Mulligan was a victim of the Larchmont disaster.

The Rhode Island Securities Company, is soon to be wound up. It is a New Jersey corporation, but it held the key to the Providence street railway situation until President Mellen of the New Haven Railroad secured both keyholder and key. The Rhode Island Securities Company, a non-operating corporation, was formed as a holding company, just as the Providence Securities Company, also non-operating, was formed to succeed it. Now that more than the promised time has been given to holders of Rhode Island Securities shares to exchange them for Providence Securities bonds, and nearly all holders of the former having availed themselves of the privilege, formal dissolution of the old company is at hand. It is merely a legal step to put an end to a corporation now useless.

While boarding a Rocky Point car for Providence, after the base ball game yesterday, Orrin E. Spencer was relieved of nearly $200 which he had in a pocketbook by a pickpocket, a description of whom was furnished to the police. Spencer felt some one brush against him at the time. A few minutes later, when he was about to take out his purse, he discovered that it had been removed from his pocket. It contained one $20 bill, eight $10 bills, six $5 bills, several $1 bills and a check for $62.70. Mr. Spencer suspects a young man who was near him just before he boarded the car. He furnished a description to the police.

NEARLY LOST HER.

[Philadelphia Record.]

A. J. Cunningham, Jr., Cincinnati lawyer and clubman, came near losing an heiress recently, because his nerve failed him. Cunningham and Miss Myrtilla Dobbyns, of Proctorville, worth $500,000 in her own name, eloped to Ironton to get married against the will of the bride's mother, who was hot on their trail.

Reaching the court house, Cunningham demurred and said, "I don't know what to do."

This remark almost lost him his bride, and she answered, "Well, we came here to get married, and if you don't know what to do I do," and with that she ran out of the court house.

Cunningham quickly followed and caught his bride-to-be on the street. He hesitated no longer.

DOWN TO FINALS.

Misses Iselin and Messrs. Sands and Slidell To Contest Last Match of Tennis Tournament.

At the Casino this morning three matches were decided in the handicap mixed doubles lawn tennis tournament, with the result that the tournament is now down to the finals, with Miss Nora Iselin and partner pitted against Miss Therese Iselin and partner for the final honors. Miss Nora Iselin and Thomas Slidell played the last remaining match of the first round against Miss Mildred Sherman and Francis Roche, and in spite of a heavy handicap won in straight sets. Miss Iselin and Mr. Slidell were then advanced another step towards the finals by the default of Miss Youkum and Mr. Russ. Miss Therese Iselin and Charles E. Sands beat Miss Angelica Brown and Herbert C. Pell, Jr., in straight sets, overcoming the odds which the handicapper had placed on them. The Misses Iselin and their partners are rated in the same class in the handicapping, and will play against each other on even terms, and a fine exhibition of tennis is expected, as not only are the Misses Iselin strong players but their partners, Mr. Sands and Mr. Slidell, are among the best of the players at the Casino.

Summary of the morning play in the handicap mixed doubles:

First Round.

Miss Nora Iselin and Thomas Slidell beat Miss M. Sherman and Francis Roche, 6-2, 7-5.

Second Round.

Miss Nora Iselin and Mr. Slidell beat Miss Youkum and Mr. Russ by default.

Miss Therese Iselin and Charles E. Sands beat Miss Brown and Herbert C. Pell, Jr., 6-2, 8-6.

A drawing has been made for a consolation in the mixed doubles between the several pairs in the handicap tournament who did not win a match in that contest. The drawing is as follows:

Four defaults were recorded in the first round, the most important being that of H. H. Whitman, the former champion, who was drawn to meet Nat Thornton, the Southern doubles champion.

The management had 12 courts going during the forenoon, with the result that by 12:30 o'clock not only had the first round been completed, but four games of the second. The summary:

Preliminary Round.

Miss Julia Sands and Lincoln L. Eyre, Jr., vs. Mrs. A. L. Norrie and J. F. Talmadge, Jr., default.

Mrs. Lorillard Spencer, Jr., and Austin Sands vs. Miss Ruth Morgan and Gerald Morgan.

First Round.

Miss Harriman and G. A. Richardson vs. Miss Barger and Willing Spencer.

Miss Paine and S. A. Palmestock vs. Miss Elizabeth Morgan and E. D. Morgan, Jr.

Mrs. A. S. Burden and Mr. Stackpole vs. winners of second preliminary match.

Miss Ruth Morgan and Gerald Morgan and Miss Barger and Willing Spencer have defaulted, bringing Mrs. Lorillard Spencer, Jr., and Austin Sands into the first round, and Miss Harriman and Mr. Richardson into the second round.

THE LONGWOOD TOURNAMENT.

First Round and Four Games of Second Finished This Morning.

BOSTON, Aug. 5.—The annual tennis tournament of the Longwood Cricket Club, its seventeenth renewal, began on the famous courts on Longwood avenue today, with a card of 83 players from all parts of the country, including national and district champions and many ranked men. The winner may be called upon to play former National Champion William A. Larned in a challenge match, although that player obtained permanent possession of the Longwood cup last year, and a new trophy has been offered by the club.

The singles event brings together such players as William A. Clothier, the national champion; R. D. Little, a member of the Davis cup team last year; Clarence Hobart, a runner-up in several national tournaments; R. C. Seaver, the Massachusetts champion, and Nat Thornton and B. M. Grant, the Southern doubles champions. Among the other noted players who have entered are Robert Leroy of New York, F. J. Sullaway of Boston, N. W. Niles, Harvard champion; A. L. Hoskins of Philadelphia, E. T. Gross of Providence and W. C. Grant of New York. The drawings indicate an interesting tournament from the start, as few of the most experts players will play until the second round.

The drawings for the Eastern doubles will be made this evening, and the play will be started tomorrow.

First Round.

W. C. Grant defeated J. A. Fowler, 6-3, 6-4, 7-5.

A. Sweetser defeated A. M. Fisher, 6-4, 6-4, 6-4.

E. V. Page defeated W. Rosenbaum, by default.

N. F. Hallowell, Jr., defeated F. L. Wood, 6-2, 6-4, 6-1.

A. L. Hoskins defeated C. W. Harvey, 6-3, 6-4, 6-1.

C. P. Gardner defeated J. A. C. Colston, 4-6, 6-3, 6-2, 6-4.

H. Torrance defeated J. R. Post, 6-4, 6-2, 6-3.

J. O. Ames defeated A. S. Bowie, 6-4, 6-1, 6-1.

Nat Thornton defeated H. H. Whitman, by default.

A. P. Hawes defeated A. E. Kent, by default.

W. J. Clothier defeated A. W. Worden, by default.

Second Round.

W. S. Warland defeated B. M. Grant, 6-4, 6-1, 6-2.

R. H. Palmer defeated C. T. Porter, 6-1, 3-6, 6-2, 7-5.

W. F. Johnson defeated Gardner Reids, 6-3, 6-1, 7-5, 6-3.

A. S. Dabney, Jr., defeated H. B. Register, 5-7, 6-2, 6-4, 6-4.

A RECORD ACHIEVEMENT.

Alfred G. Vanderbilt Judges in Four Hours the Merits of Fifty Horses for Trips of Venture Coach.

Keen sportsman, clever whip and expert judge, Alfred G. Vanderbilt demonstrated his ability as a horseman recently by choosing 50 coach horses inside of four hours at the Tichenor-Grand Company's establishment, in New York. This is equivalent to picking a horse every five minutes—truly a record achievement when it is understood that the trials involved examination of the horses in their stalls, also on the pavement, in and out of harness. Conformation, quality, action and soundness had all to be given careful consideration.

A striking quartet of piebalds and another four of golden chestnuts were chosen to make up the town teams for the daily trips of the Venture coach, which is to run during the season between New York and Ardsley. Then the relieving teams to be used en route were added to the list quickly until the complete outfit of 50 high class animals became Mr. Vanderbilt's property. He will devote the next six weeks to matching and mating these horses, so that the various teams can be counted upon to work together smoothly and carry out the arduous schedule.

After the coaching season closes all these horses will be disposed of at auction in the usual manner. Of excellent value to start with, the horses will no doubt be in finer condition after Mr. Vanderbilt has handled them on his coaching trips, as it is well understood that no one can condition horses better or work them with a greater degree of skill.

SALE OF WHARF PROPERTY.

A. O'D. Taylor has sold for Job A. Peckham a lot of land, with wooden structure thereon, situated on the northern side of the way leading from Thames street over the government property to the harbor front. It is bounded by this way, about 50 feet, on the south; on the west by government land, 20 feet; on the north by part of the late Samuel Engs estate, about 50 feet, and on the east by property of T. T. Pitman, 20 feet, the total area being about 1,000 feet, and the price paid $1,000. The purchaser is Thomas B. Connolly, who will erect a handsome block of buildings thereon.

PROBATE COURT.

In the probate court this morning an exemplified copy of the will and probate thereof of Wesley Palmer was ordered recorded. Letters of administration de bonis non with the will annexed on the estate of Joseph M. Hammett were granted to Thomas P. Peckham. Letters of administration on the estate of Sarah E. Allan were granted to Kathering H. and Eliza S. Allan. The administrator's first and final account with the estate of Almira Watson was allowed. Inventories of the estates of Virginia Muenchinger, Smith Bosworth, Arthur Hazard and Thomas Lonergan were ordered recorded. Permission was granted to the guardian of Virginia Muenchinger to sell the inchoate right of dower to real estate.

LOCAL BRIEFS.

—Judge Bosworth of Bristol was in town.

—Miss Whittemore of Virginia is visiting Miss Catherne Waters.

—Mr. Blanchard Randall is guest of Mr. James Woodward at "The Cloisters."

—Dr. H. J. Cottrell is visiting his parents, Alderman and Mrs. J. B. Cottrell.

—Miss Irene Mathewson of Valley Falls is visiting Miss Eckhardt on Spring street.

—The Daily News nine and the Clerks are scheduled to have another contest this afternoon.

—Mrs. G. Fantini and her daughter May arrived Sunday morning from Savannah, Ga., for a short visit.

—Herbert L. Dyer has rented, through his Broadway office, for John A. Leary, the tenement at 24 Broadway, to Mrs. B. Wilson.

—There will be an excursion tomorrow over the New York, New Haven & Hartford road, from stations from Wellaston to Middleboro.

—Edward L. Spencer has rented for Clarence C. Alger, the furnished cottage at 60 Friendship street, to James H. Wilber of Fall River.

—Eugene Hale Jr., Mrs. Garrison, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Iselin, Ogden L. Mills, Blanchard Randall, Samuel Powel and Miss Caroline Wilmerding are registered at the Casino.

—Mr. and Mrs. S. Melville Hammett, who have been visiting Mr. Hammett's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Schuyler Hammett, left this morning for New York where Mr. Hammett was unexpectedly called on business.

—The annual re-union of the First Rhode Island regiment will take place Saturday next at Rocky Point. The A. A. Barker Association of this city will have a meeting to make arrangements for participating.

—W. S. Howland and H. Hollis of New York, Frank E. Burns of Bath, Maine, James E. Vetoe and A. N. Card of Boston and William Morrell and P. A. Thyson of Washington are registered at the Perry House.

—M. Cole has begun the work of dredging at the old harbor, Block Island, for which he was recently given the contract. This is the first work done by the new dredger, which he had built to replace the Columbia, burned at Block Island.

—About 800 arrived from East Greenwich this morning by steamer Warwick on the annual excursion of Maschachaug Counsel, Royal Arcanum, of that place. This excursion is a popular one for the inhabitants of that region and is always well patronized.

—The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Newport Casino was held this morning. A satisfactory financial statement was presented and the following governors, whose terms expired, were re-elected for the term ending August, 1911: Hamilton McK. Twombly, Edward J. Berwind, Lorillard Spencer, Samuel F. Barger.

—The total rainfall yesterday, according to the gauge at the Water Works pumping station, was .39 of an inch. This was divided into .19 falling before 6 a. m. and .20 after 6, so that the fall was evenly divided by that hour. Some will say that more must have fallen, but that is a fairly good amount, and it fell in such a way as to do good and not damage.

—The Newport Yacht Racing Association will give a race August 21 for schooners and sloops of classes K and J of the New York Yacht Club. It is probable that there will also be races, August 17 and August 21 by the special 30-foot classes of the New York Yacht club, for which prizes will be given. The start will be from Brenton's Reef. Several of the summer residents, including Mrs. A. G. Vanderbilt, are expected to give cups for the 30-footers.

PRINCE BORCHESE IN BELIN.

Cheered on Arrival, and Received Ovation All Along the Way.

BERLIN, Aug. 5.—Prince Scipion Borghese, the leading contestant in the Pekin-Paris automobile race, which was started from the Chinese capital June 10, arrived here at 5 o'clock this afternoon. Four automobiles with a deputation of the Imperial Automobile Club and members of the Italian colony met the prince at Muencheberg, 40 miles east of Berlin, and escorted him to Hotel Unter den Linden, where a crowd of some hundreds of people was in waiting to cheer his arrival. The prince immediately called for a bath, and said he had intended to push on to Paris tomorrow morning, but had decided to accept an invitation to be present at a luncheon to be given in his honor by the Imperial Automobile Club at noon, and a dinner to be given by the Italian colony tomorrow evening.

Prince Borghese crossed the German frontier at Eydtkhuhen Sunday morning, and there parted from his Russian escort. At the frontier he was met by a party of automobilists from the Koenigsburg. The trip to Berlin was without incident, except that the prince received an ovation all along the route. He was accompanied most of the way by automobilists belonging to clubs between Koenigsburg and Berlin.

A GASOLINE EXPLOSION.

Launch Torn Asunder and Burned, and Party of Fall River Men Have Narrow Escape.

Another gasoline explosion on a pleasure launch occurred yesterday afternoon, off Fall River. A party of 10 had just left the wharf at the foot of Central street in a 28-foot launch, bound for one of the shore resorts, when the gasoline tank exploded. The men jumped overboard and were picked up by men from the shore, fortunately being close to land when the explosion took place. Not one of the party escaped without some reminder of the fiery ordeal through which they passed, and two were so seriously burned that they were sent to a hospital. The boat was burned, and before burning was practically torn asunder by the explosion. The cause is not known, but it is suspected that there was a leak from the gasoline tank and some one dropped a match or a lighted cigarette near where the gasoline was leaking.

This accident is another which illustrates the danger of going out in home-made gasoline boats. The piping often is apparently not equal to the strain put on the boat; perhaps some of the boats are not strongly enough built, and the vibration shakes them until the piping is affected, and then something happens. That well built and properly piped launches handled by men who know their business can be run with safety is shown by the way the launches which run from here and Jamestown have been run day and night every day in the year. But there is nothing amateurish about their construction or handling.

DEATH OF ROBERT MACFARLANE

A Resident of Newport for Twenty Years and Well Known About the City.

Mr. Robert Macfarlane died yesterday afternoon at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Wallace Martland, at the advanced age of 86. Mr. Macfarlane had been in his usual health up to a week ago, and yesterday, though not so active as usual, was about the house and after dinner went up stairs for his usual quiet smoke. He passed away sitting in a chair, with pipe in hand, apparently without suffering.

The deceased had resided in Newport 20 years, coming here with his wife, now dead some six years, to reside with their son-in-law and daughter, and take things easily. He had been a designer in the cotton industry, and saving his money, was able when he felt the approach of old age to take a needed rest and enjoy his declining years quietly and pleasantly, and that he did so is the opinion of all who knew him and his manner of life. Those who remember him on Washington square, feeding the pigeons, with the birds flying all about him, have recollections of a man who was kind and gentle and took life in a quiet way, and such he was.

He had been a big man, strong and robust, and after coming to Newport was for some years interested in boating, having a small boat, the Argo, in which he took considerable comfort. Age and the attendant stiffness caused him to abandon this and he lately took his boating by a visit to Harbor Master Gladding's shop and a talk with old-timers.

Besides Mrs. Martland, the deceased had one son, now dead, and a number of grandchildren. He has a brother, John, still residing in Fall River. He was a member of the Masonic order, belonging to one of the Fall River lodges.

JAMESTOWN.

[Regular correspondence of the News.]

Mr Ijams of New York spent Sunday with his family here.

Mr. S. W. Woodward has returned from Washington.

Mr. I. Bergman, and Drs. Greene and Sweet of Newport spent yesterday at their camps at Beavertail.

The trial of the submarines over the mile course off the east shore attracts much attention from the numerous automobile parties which cross the ferries between Newport and the island.

The Misses Hathaway of Providence are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sowle on Clinton avenue.

Mr. Dumont Clarke's steam yacht Surprise of New York is anchored in the east harbor.

In spite of the stormy weather yesterday morning, several parties spent the day at Beavertail.

Mr. Job W. Tefft of Washington is guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Tefft, on Cole street.

Mr. F. H. Clarke of Boston spent Sunday with his family on Narragansett avenue.

Mr. Joseph Wharton, who has been ill in London, arrived in New York Saturday on steamship Baltic, accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. J. B. Lippincott, and his grandson, J. Wharton Lippincott. The latter said that Mr. Wharton had improved greatly in health during the voyage and that his condition is not considered serious. Mr. Wharton came by special train to Newport and is now at his summer home "Marbella."

Some of the long needed rain arrived yesterday, commencing at an early hour and continuing until noon. Little water fell, however, as at no time did it rain hard, but what little did fall freshened the foliage.

The meeting at the rectory appointed for Wednesday to arrange for the St. Matthew's fair has been indefinitely postponed as a movement is under way to raise the sum needed by subscription.

MESABA RANGE STRIKE OVER.

Nearly All the Mines in Operation, and No Sign of Trouble.

DULUTH, Minn., Aug. 6.—The strike on the Mesaba range is practically a thing of the past. Nearly all of the mines are in active operation this morning, and there has been no sign of any trouble.

A QUIET SUNDAY.

Much Needed Rain in the Morning Keeps Excursionists Away—Grass and Foliage Benefited.

The rain yesterday lasted long enough to put a quietus on excursions, and there was nothing in that line, as the rain continued until it was too late for steamboat traveling, and when the rain did cease it looked threatening. In the afternoon it cleared beautifully and those who then ventured out found nature smiling after a much needed washing. It was wonderful to notice how quickly all growing things responded to the rain, and what a difference there was in the appearance of foliage compared with the day before. In some places the grass was so badly burned that it did not show signs of coming back, but generally the rain, coming as it did at the right time, counted for much and the grass has recuperated.

There was nothing special for those who provide for excursionists, as there were no excursionists, but the afternoon was delightfully cool and the driving was fine, over the well washed streets and roads. Things were quiet at the beach in the bathing line, though there were many there in the afternoon.

TRANSPORT PUTS BACK.

Warren's Condenser Tube Gives Out When Sixty Miles at Sea.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 5.—Transport Warren, which left Saturday for the Philippines, with a large contingent of troops and passengers, was compelled, by a breakdown of machinery, to put back to port when 60 miles out at sea. An examination revealed the fact that one of the condenser tubes was in such a bad condition that salt water was running through and mixing with fresh water.

Chief Engineer Donnelly of the transport department is in hope that new tubes can be installed by Tuesday.

LAUNCHING OF THE PINNACE.

Birth of American Shipbuilding Celebrated at Bath, Me.

BATH, Me., Aug. 5.—The city of Bath today assumed the honor belonging to the small town of Popham, and celebrated the three hundredth anniversary of the birth of American shipbuilding in a manner more extensive than would be possible for the town. The first launching in the United States took place at Popham beach, when pinnace Virginia, the product of the disheartened members of the Popham colony, slid down the crude ways to the ocean.

Although the formal opening of the observances is not to take place until tonight, a program of entertainment was prepared for the day and included a reception of distinguished guests by committees, a reception of American and foreign warships, a balloon ascension, a reception to the officers of the American and foreign warships which will take part in the celebration, and an automobile tour of the city.

A succession of bonfires along both sides of the Kennebec river from Bath to the oceans has been prepared as one of the features of the evening's program, which will include the literary exercises marking the formal opening.

TRACTION KING AND SPORTSMAN

August Belmont Has Really Laid the Foundation of New York's Subways.

[Broadway Magazine.]

The powerful personality of August Belmont is only beginning to receive its share of attention from the students of the nation's affairs. The first enlightening article that has appeared concerning Belmont tells many interesting facts about this famous traction king and sportsman. In the extension of a great rapid transit system for the city, in guarding a monopoly for himself, Belmont has swept steel-shod over every obstacle, and to gain his ends has even openly scoffed the laws of a city and a state.

When he wanted an East River extension from the Subway at Forty-second street to the great reaches of Long Island he seized the old Steinway, 1878, but never utilized, tunnel franchise and rushed a bill before the state legislature stipulating changes in location and in specifications to suit his needs. When the bill was defeated at Albany he calmly returned to New York and began the work without legal sanction.

The city protested, and the corporation counsel issued injunctions, all of which were skillfully evaded. When the courts finally decided that the Steinway tunnel franchise had lapsed at midnight, December 31, 1906, Belmont came forward naively and said: "Gentlemen, the tube is finished!" It wasn't finished in all probability, but since admittance was flatly denied to every city official, the true facts of the case were never known.

He furthermore dominated the Rapid Transit Commission, leading it willy-nilly, actually converting it into a steering committee to further his own ends. But he made the Rapid Transit Commission work as no other man had succeeded in doing; and he has really laid the foundation of New York's subways. When all is said and done he will be counted the real dynamic force behind the most vital change that has ever happened in the city's history, its rapid transitizing, its tunnelization, as the city of Greater New York.

THE FIRST MEERSCHAUM PIPE.

[Louisville Courier-Journal.]

Kavol Kowates, A Pesth shoemaker, invented the meerschaum pipe. He died in 1784, and there is talk among Pesth smokers of erecting a statue to his memory. A large piece of meerschaum was brought to Pesth by Count Andrassy in 1723. It had been given to the Count in Turkey. He fetched it home because as a piece of white clay of extraordinary light specific gravity it pleased him. Kavol Kowates was noted in Pesth for his skill in carving and Count Andrassy took his chunk of light white clay to him and said:

"Make, fellow, something pretty out of this."

The ingenious Kavol, a great smoker, thought that the porousness of the white clay adapted it well for pipes, and accordingly he made two from it, one for himself and one for the Count Andrassy. The pipes were charming and they smoked superbly. The fame of them spread. In course of time meerschaum mining and meerschaum pipemaking became two of the recognized industries of the world. The original Kavol Kowates pipe, the world's first meerschaum, is still preserved in the Pesth Museum.

AN ENGLISH AMENITY.

A striking difference between our manners and those of our English cousins was shown one day at a garden party. The hostess, an American, was speaking to one of her guests, an Englishwoman of rank.

"Dear Lady B," she said, "there are some sandwiches which I made with my own hands, particularly for you. You know I've often told you about our American sandwiches, and how good they are; here are different sorts, lettuce, and cucumber, if you care for grass," or if you like a savory batter, try the cream cheese ones with pimentoes. I've some sweet ones, too, raisins and nuts chopped together—which will you try first?"

She held a plate in each hand, a plate filled with dainty-looking sandwiches, and they were extended invitingly toward her guest, who looked at them critically, then said in the clear, high-pitched voice of the well-bred Englishwoman:

"Oh, thank you, so kind of you—but do you know, I never touch the nawsty things?"

Waterbury went to Mr. Vanderbilt's assistance and took the guests to their destination. Later the machine was temporarily repaired and went back to the farm."

—The memorial mural tablet to the late Rev. Charles T. Brooks in Channing Church was the work of Augustus St. Gaudens, who died in Boston yesterday. The monument to the late Mrs. Alfred Smith in the Island Cemetery, which has been thought by many to have been designed by Augustus St. Gaudens, was by Louis St. Gaudens, a brother of the more distinguished sculptor.

—A party of Newporters, who had spent a portion of Saturday and Sunday at Mishiwana Camp in Exeter, were entertained at luncheon at the Casino at Narragansett Pier by Mr. Herbert L. Dyer. The party included Messrs J. Stacy Brown, William H. Sanders, Anthony Stuart, George F. Cozzens, Hiram Burlingame, Harold A. Peckham, William C. Cozzens and Edward S. Peckham.

—The lawn fete to be given at "Harbour Court," the residence of Mrs. John Nicholas Brown, for the benefit of the choir auxiliary of Emmanuel Church will afford an opportunity to inspect one of the handsomest estates in Newport and at the same time to aid a worthy cause and had plenty of entertainment. Among the novelties to be introduced, "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" is expected to afford amusement, for the little folks and for the grown-ups as well.

PLANS FOR JAMESTOWN VISIT.

Rhode Island Commission Arranges Water Trip for State Officials to the Exposition.

The Rhode Island commissioners to the Jamestown Ter-Centennial Exposition have practically completed their arrangements for the trip of the state officials to Hampton Roads the second week in September, which is to be officially known as "Rhode Island Week" at the Exposition. The trip will be made on this occasion by water, differing in that report from the journey made by the state party to attend the opening of the Exposition last April, when the entire distance, except the short sail from Cape Charles to Pine Ridge, was made by rail.

The party will leave Providence Saturday evening, September 7, on one of the fleet of steamers of the Merchants & Miners Transportation Company, for Norfolk. It is expected that the official party will make up the full complement of the steamer, and that arrangements can be made for landing the party at the Exposition grounds, without taking them to Norfolk. The party will have four days at the Exposition, including Tuesday, September 10, the anniversary of Commodore Perry's victory on Lake Erie, which will be distinctively Rhode Island day. It will leave for the return trip by water Thursday evening, arriving in Providence Saturday, September 14.

The Rhode Island Commission has made considerable progress with the matter of framing the personnel of the state party. It is understood that the list of those whom it was at first proposed should comprise the party has been pruned considerably in an effort to bring it down to within the comfortable carrying capacity of the boat of the Merchants & Miners Line, and also to ensure keeping the expense of the trip within the appropriation.

Judge John T. Blodgett, with Mrs. Blodgett and daughter, are at the Rhode Island building at the Exposition grounds, where they expect to spend the month of August. Dennis H. Sheahan, another member of the commission, with Mrs. Sheahan, left Providence Saturday evening on the Merchants & Miners steamer Dorchester, and will spend the greater part of the month of August at the Exposition grounds.

CURED.

If dyspepsia makes you feel tired, dull and incapable of sustained effort, if pains are continually distracting your mind from your occupation, if you must belch gases, your health must surely fail. Is it not good business sense and the best of insurance to use Dr. Richards Dyspepsia Tablets, which will cure you and destroy all these drawbacks? Read what a well known business man of your own city has to say regarding a remedy that stood the test of time and cured when others failed.

Mr. Benjamin Easton, (Ivory man), residing at 204 Broadway, Newport, R.I., says: "No one who has not suffered from dyspepsia as I have can appreciate how good it feels to be restored to perfect health again. I attribute this wonderful change in the condition of my health to Dr. Richards Dyspepsia Tablets and nothing else. I tried everything under the sun that I thought would do me good but without the desired results. Finally upon the advice of a friend, I obtained a bottle of Dr. Richards Dyspepsia Tablets at Cotton's Drug Store. They relieved me at once of all that stomach misery with which I had suffered for so many years. The pains in my stomach have vanished, I eat heartily and my food causes me no distress whatever and I am enjoying fine health and as I said before I give all the credit to Dr. Richards Dyspepsia Tablets."

For sale by all Druggists. Accept no other. Price 50 cents per bottle. Made by Dr. Richards Dyspepsia Tablet Association, 53-55 Worth street, New York City.

NOT AFFECTED BY NEW FRIENDSHIPS.

Russia and Germany Still on the Best of Terms.

Swinemunde Meeting May Influence British Negotiations.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 5.—Public opinion here, while impressed with the ceremoniousness of the Swinemunde meeting, to which the infrequency of Emperor Nicholas's visits abroad adds interest, nevertheless attaches importance thereto only as affecting the progress of the Anglo-Russian negotiations, which will soon come to a close. The choice of the time for the interview, just preceding the conclusion of the Anglo-Russian accord, is taken as a demonstration of the fact that the traditional friendship of the Russian and German courts remains intact, and has not been affected by the newer friendships.

The present state of the Anglo-Russian negotiations is such that Germany could easily affect the ultimate issue. During the past two years the Russian and British governments have taken up successively all the questions affecting their interests, principally in the near and middle East, and, while the utmost frankness has been displayed on both sides, coupled with evident willingness to reach a common ground for agreement, yet up to the present the whole scheme is still in process of negotiation. A great deal depends on the deliberation of the next few weeks. The understanding may be expanded into a political agreement similar to the Anglo-French entente, and it may be contracted into a settlement of local questions. In either case the negotiations have served to bring the two powers closer together than they have been for a century.

The Russian Liberal press, whose sympathies naturally favor Russia's adherence to the Anglo-French group, ventures the opinion that the meeting of the emperors at Swinemunde will not exercise any appreciable effect on foreign affairs. The Russ, however, regrets that the interview preceded the conclusion of the Russo-British agreement.

The Rech, discussing the Novoe Vremya's suggestion that Russia use her good offices to reinstate Germany in the confidence of the Western powers, questions whether Russian interests would be benfitted by such a course of action.

GERMANY ENTIRELY SATISFIED.

Russo-British Agreement Concerns, Chiefly, Status Quo in Asia.

BERLIN, Aug. 5.—The Russian foreign minister, M. Iswolsky, communicated to Chancellor von Buelow Saturday the terms of the Russo-British agreement. The German government, the Associated Press is semi officially informed, has indicated its entire satisfaction, nothing therein being regarded as detrimental to German interests. The agreement it is affirmed in non-official quarters, almost altogether concerns the status quo in Asia, especially in Persia.

ON THE GERMAN FLAGSHIP.

Both Emperors Go to Sea to Witness 30 Battleships Manoeuvre.

SWINEMUNDE, Prussia, Aug. 5.—Emperor William went on board Russian imperial yacht Standart at 10 o'clock this morning and took Emperor Nicholas with him on board German battleship Deutschland, flagship of Prince Henry of Prussia, which, after hoisting the flag of a grand admiral, and both imperial standards, stood out to sea, followed by 30 warships, battleships and cruisers, to take part in a series of manoeuvres.

GENERAL KARAKOZOFF KILLED.

Odessan Ex-Governor General Shot in Centre of Town Today.

PIATIGORSK, Caucasus, Aug. 5.—General Karakozoff, ex-governor general of Odessa, was shot and killed in the centre of the town early this morning. The assassins escaped.

General Karakozoff was commander of the Lubna dragoons when, July 3, 1905, he was appointed governor general of Odessa. He took severe measures to repress disturbances, instructing the police to fire directly into the mob. He was succeeded as governor general by General Kaulbars October 23, 1905.

WILL NOT INTERFERE.

Italian Government Not to Intervene in Anti-Clerical Agitation.

TURIN, Italy, Aug. 5.—The Stampl today printed an interview with Premier Giolitti, in which he is quoted as reiterating that the government will not change its policy on account of the anti-clerical agitation in Italy. He added that the strictest orders have been issued to prevent violence and protect the churches, convents and other religious property, but the government will not intervene in any fashion.

Regarding the charges brought against the religious bodies, the premier said "That is a matter for the courts to decide, and the country would have a right to complain if the government interfered to restrain the press, which is free, both for clericals and anti-clericals."

DROWNED IN IRELAND.

Thomas Myler Hoisted Stars and Stripes Over Santiago de Cuba.

ALNLOW, Ireland, Aug. 5.—Thomas Myler, who claims that he hoisted the Stars and Stripes over Santiago de Cuba during the Spanish-American war, was drowned yesterday, while practicing for an attempt to swim St. George's channel.

A CALIFORNIA LAND FRAUD.

False Entries Made on More Than 4,000 Acres of Imperial Valley.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 5.—O. R. Robinson, receiver in the local land office, yesterday said: "Fraudulent entry on more than 4,000 acres of Imperial valley land has been made. General Prescott and myself made the discovery some time ago, and secret service agents are now collecting evidence while have believe will uncover a land fraud equal in importance to that in Oregon."

On file in the land office are 14 affidavits charging fraud in desert entries. Many similar affidavits will be filed this week, it is said.

HAYWOOD'S HAPPIEST MOMENT.

Greeted by Cheer After Cheer of Enthusiastic Crowd in Denver.

DENVER, Col., Aug. 5.—The celebration given in honor of William D. Haywood, the miners' official recently acquitted of connection with the murder of ex-Governor Steunenberg of Idaho, on his return home from Boise last night was considerably curtailed, because of the lateness of his arrival. Plans for a great gathering of people at the station, which was to be followed by an open air meeting, were abandoned, and, instead, a committee of 100 labor unionists was on hand to welcome him. A crowd of several thousand persons, despite the lateness of the hour, was also gathered.

When Haywood stepped from the train, supporting his invalid wife, a great cheer went up from the crowd. A rush for the gates was made, and the police was compelled to use force to make the people step back so that the gates could be opened. A space less than three feet wide was made. As Haywood walked up this file hundreds of hands were stretched towards him, but his solicitude for his wife caused him to resist the desire to grasp the many hands extended. Continued cheering greeted him and kept his face wreathed in smiles.

When Haywood saw his wife safely seated in a carriage he stood on the rear seat and shouted cheer after cheer as he waved his hat. The crowd joined with him, and for several minutes the roar continued. Half a hundred men started to unhitch the horses and attach a rope, so that they could drag the conveyance up the street. Haywood requested that they forego this expression of regard, and they desisted. It took several minutes to clear the streets. Then the horses pulling Haywood's carriage started away at a brisk trot.

Haywood, on arrival at the Albany Hotel, responded to demands for a speech by saying that he would "tell them all about it later," and asked to be allowed to retire for the night. Haywood referred to a prediction that he said mine owners had made, that he would come back to Colorado in a pine box. "I am very much alive, you see," he said. "This great reception is the happiest moment of my life. My cup of happiness would be complete if Moyer and Pettibone were by my side. One thing I am convinced of, and the last 18 months have dentifully taught me, is that when unions stand together you cannot break them."

Haywood then shook hands with the people until exhaustion compelled him to stop.

OVERTURNED BY TOW LINE.

Launch Swept Beneath Barge in Hampton Roads; Child Drowned.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., Aug. 5.—A gasoline launch carrying a family party of five men and a four-year-old boy was overturned by a tug's tow line, and swept beneath the barge the tug was hauling, in Hampton Roads last night. The child was drowned. The others were rescued, but one had broken his leg in attempt to leap on the barge.

Chiford Garrett, 4 years of age, with his father, G. P. Garrett; the latter's brothers, R. Garett of Cincinnati; J. I. Garrett of Jamestown island, Edgar Garrett of Newport News, and a cousin, George H. Garrett of Richmond, left the exposition grounds at 10 o'clock in a launch, to come to this city. Misunderstanding the signal lights, they ran into the tow line of tug Saulsburg of the New York, Philadelphia & Norfolk railroad. In an instant George P. Garrett, with his little son in his arms and his brother, R. E. Garrett, were struggling in the water. They were swept beneath the barge, and when they came to the surface the child was dead. Clinging to the wreckage of their launch, which they managed to reach, they kept afloat until a lifeboat from steamer Montauk rescued them. The other three of the party leaped to the barge when the crash came. One George H. Garrett, shattered his leg in jumping, and was taken to a Norfolk hospital. Two of the brothers were brought to this city, and it was believed until today that all the others were dead.

MR. GLOVER IN CONCORD.

With Daughter, He Arrives from West to Testify in Eddy Hearing.

CONCORD, N. H., Aug. 5.—George W. Glover and his daughter, Miss Mary Baker Glover, who arrived here at noon today from their home in Lead City, S. D., said that they came east upon request of counsel, who wished their testimony for use in the hearing to be held before the masters on the question of Mrs. Eddy's competency next Monday. They acknowledged the fact that they had received a letter from Mr. Glover's mother, transmitted to him by Miss Eva Thompson, but said that this letter had nothing to do with his trip. Upon advice of counsel he refused to discuss the case further with an Associated Press representative. After this brief interview Mr. Glover and his daughter left for the law office of Martin & Howe, their counsel.

DENIES ANY VIOLATION.

Counsel for Indicted Booth Company Gives Line of Defense.

CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—Denial of any violation of the Elkins law will be the defense entered by the A. Booth Company, the fish corporation, when brought to trial in the United States court for accepting rebates, as charged in indictments returned Saturday by a federal grand jury, according to a statement made by Justice Chancellor, counsel for the Booth Company, last night.

GENERAL GRAFT MOVEMENT.

San Francisco Battle Extends from Grand Jury to Supreme Court.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 5.—A general movement along the graft line of battle was made today. It extends from the session of the grand jury, which is accumulating evidence against the officials of the telephone company, to the state supreme court, where the champions of Mayor Edward R. Taylor are fighting to establish the validity of his appointing power.

The task of impaneling a jury to try Theodore V. Halsey, outside agent of the Pacific States Telephone Company, on a charge of bribery, was resumed before Superior Judge Dunne, while Emile M. Zimmer, vice president of the corporation, appeared in the police court for arraignment on a charge of misdemeanor for refusing to testify at the trial of Louis Glass. The justices of the supreme court took up the application of Harry M. McKenney, Mayor Taylor's private secretary, for a writ of mandamus compelling Auditor Horton to sign McKenney's salary demand. McKenney's petition is a short cut toward settling the question of the validity of Taylor's tenure of office.

A Midsummer Street Toilette.

The typical midsummer street toilette is the white toilette, white tailored suit, white hat, white parasol, gloves and shoes. In the plainer suits built on the lines of the Prince Chap and pony models, pique is used quite as much as linen, but in the dressier suits elaborate with embroideries and braidings, linen finds first favor. Heavy Irish crochet appliques make this two-piece pony suit, so simple in line, quite an elaborate creation, simulating the collar, trimming the edges of the front, the bottom of the coat, and the sleeves. Likewise, the smartly gored short walking skirt. The suit is of linen, and a smart linen parasol accompanies it. The parasol is of a finer quality linen than the suit, almost a handkerchief variety, in fact, and embroidered in blind effect one third the way from the tips to the ferule, two tiny rosettes of white ribbon being set on the edge of each gore. Appropriate headgear for such a suit is the lingerie sailor of eyelet embroidery trimmed with white taffeta ribbon and large white roses with green foliage. The gloves are of spun silk, and thin lisle hose are worn with the white pumps.

APPLY FOR OLD POSITIONS.

Lithographers' Trouble Ended: Men Return to Work Unconditionally.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—The struggle of the Lithographic Artists, Engravers and Designers' League with the National Association of Employing Lithographers, which began in August, 1906, has been ended, as a result of the abandonment of the fight by the union, according to an announcement made today by Richard Kirchelt, national president of the Lithographic Artists, Engravers and Designers' League.

The trouble had its origin in the posting of open-shop notices by the employing Lithographers in most of the larger cities of the country last August, and their requirement that all their employes resign from their union. This the men refused to do, and they were locked out in Boston, Springfield, Providence, New York, Philadelphia, Rochester, Buffalo, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Detroit, Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Louis, as well as in a number of smaller cities.

The lockout continued without any attempt at compromise or settlements being made by either sides. The union finally decided to ask the men to vote upon a proposition to return to work unconditionally, and at meetings called for that purpose the proposition was adopted. The workers are now applying to their former employes for their old positions.

APPROVES LANDIS'S DECISION.

Iowa Governor Places Certain Railroads in Standard Oil Class.

PLAINFIELD, Ill., Aug. 5.—In a Chautauqua lecture here yesterday Governor A. B. Cummins of Iowa commended Judge Landis's action in imposing a heavy fine upon the Standard Oil Company of Indiana. The governor also strongly condemned the over-capitalization of railroads. He placed the Chicago & Alton and the Chicago & Rock Island railroads in the class with Standard Oil for questionable dealings, declaring that the manner in which the stock of these roads is watered is no less than a crime.

"Four years ago, the capital stock of the Rock Island was $75,000,000," said Governor Cummins. "Since that time earnings have increased, and, instead of giving the public the benefit of the profits which it had helped up for the road, the capital stock was watered until today it has reached the gigantic sum of $342,000,000. In the same manner the Alton stock has been watered from $33,000,000 to $113,000,000."

"When we learn of such business tactics it does not take any great mental acumen to see that we must call a halt. Judge Landis has done just what was necessary."

SECRETARY OF STATE ENJOINED

Restraint from Forfeiting Rock Island's Right to Kansas Business.

ST. PAUL, Aug. 5.—Judge Van Dee sitting today enjoined the secretary of the state of Arkansas from forfeiting the right of the Rock Island to do business in Arkansas.

ADMITTED VIOLATION OF LAWS.

Landis Orders Dissolution of School and Furniture Trust.

CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—Judge Landis, in the United States district court today, ordered the dissolution of the Church and School Furniture Trust, recently punished by fines amounting to $43,000 for admitted violation of the anti-trust laws.

R. T. WILSON, JR., TAKES UP SHEEP FARMING.

Fifty prize Sheep—10 ewes and 10 rams from the farm of Henry L. Wardwell, Pinehurst, Springfield Centre, N. Y., were shipped from New York on Savannah liner City of Atlanta Saturday, to R. T. Wilson, Jr., at his southern home, Palmetto Bluff, Hamilton, S. C. Mr. Wilson is going into sheep farming, and has engaged Daniel Carrigan of Fremantle, Australia, to take charge of the farm. Carrigan has had long experience in cattle raising, having spent 40 years in the business on the plains of Australia.

Every one of the 50 sheep yesterday, which are of the Shropshire breed, has a pedigree, and can trace its ancestry back to champions which years ago grazed on the green slopes of the Shropshire hills, in England. The whole consignment was valued at about $3,000.

LANDING REPRODUCED.

Goswold Tercentenary Celebration Opens in Falmouth Today.

WOODS HOLE, Mass., Aug. 5.—A reproduction of the landing of that bold seaman, Bartholomew Gosnold, with his crew of equally daring men, in the good ship Concord, and of his reception by the friendly Indian inhabitants at Nobska, was the feature of the first day's observances of the Gosnold Tercentenary celebration, which will be continued in Falmouth during the week, and which will be marked by the dedication of a memorial to the hardy mariners of the town.

Representative William C. Lovering was the principal speaker at the opening exercises. Rowing races between crews from the United States revenue cutters were the sporting features of the day.

GETTING READY FOR INQUIRY.

Preparing for Investigation of Charges Against Chicago & Alton.

CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—Preparations for the investigation by the federal grand jury of the charges against the Chicago & Alton railway in connection with the granting of rebates to the Standard Oil Company of Indiana were commenced today. Subpoenas will be issued tomorrow for the witnesses, the first of whom will testify August 14.

AN OLD MAN'S TRIBUTE.

An Ohio Fruit Raiser, 78 Years Old, Cured of a Terrible Case After Ten Years of Suffering.

When suffering daily torture
From backache, rheumatic pain,
Any ill of kidneys or bladder,
Turn to Doan's Kidney Pills.
A cure endorsed by thousands.
Read an old man's tribute.

Sidney Justus, fruit dealer, of Mentor, Ohio, says: "I was cured by Doan's Kidney Pills of a severe case of kidney trouble of eight or ten years' standing. I suffered the most severe backache and other pains in the region of the kidneys. These were especially severe when stooping to lift anything, and often I could hardly straighten my back. The aching was bad in the daytime, but just as bad at night, and I was always lame in the morning. I was bothered with rheumatic pains and dropical spelling of the feet. The urinary passages were painful, and the secretions were discolored and so free that often had to rise at night. I felt tired all day. Half a box served to relieve me, and three boxes effected a permanent cure."

ABOUT BABY.

Mothers Should Ask Their Physician What Food To Use.

When it is necessary to wean the baby, the physician should always be consulted as to what food to use.

The physician most certainly will advise against the use of condensed milk, or cow's milk alone, although he will quite likely advise the use of what is called modified milk.

The chances are that he will prescribe Justfood, which, when prepared according to the simple directions accompanying the package, modifies cow's milk in exactly the way that would be recommended by leading physicians.

Justfood is so delicate and so easily absorbed that the baby always keeps it down, making it unnecessary to use lime water or medicine.

It is, too, a most economical food, costing, prepared for use, less than 1c a meal for little babies. Sold by druggists 50c., $1.00, $1.50. Ask your physician his opinion of Justfood, for quite likely he has used it for years.

We should be glad to send a liberal sample of the food to any mother or physician. Justfood Co., 80 N. Franklin St., Syracuse, N. Y.

PAIN

Pain in the head—pain anywhere, has its cause. Pain is congestion, pain is blood pressure—nothing else usually. At least, so says Dr. Shoop, and to prove it he has created a little pink tablet. That tablet—called Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablet—coaxes blood pressure away from pain centers. Its effect is charming, pleasingly delightful. Gently, though safely, it surely equalizes the blood circulation.

If you have a headache, it's blood pressure.

If it's painful periods with women, same cause.

If you are sleepless, restless, nervous, it's blood congestion—blood pressure. That surely is a certainty, for Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablets stop it in 20 minutes, and the tablets simply distribute the unnatural blood pressure.

Bruise your finger, and doesn't it get red, and swell, and pain you? Of course it does. It's congestion, blood pressure. You'll find it where pain is—always. It's simply Common Sense.

We sell at 25 cents, and cheerfully recommend

A GOOD BALL GAME.

Crowd Sees Seamen Gunners and Y. M. C. A. Contest.

Both Sides Do Their Best, but the Torpedo Station Team Wins Out, 9 to 2, by Superior Play.

There was a large gathering of enthusiastic base ball "fans," and people who are not fans but enjoy the game, and others at the Civic League grounds Saturday to see the Seamen Gunners and the Young Men's Christian Association team play their third game, the Seamen Gunners winning, 9-2. The weather smiled on the contest, for the sun shone hot and clear and a player felt like exerting himself. The grounds looked the best of the season, and there were all the necessary accessories for a good game—and there was a good game. Some folks feel that this is not so, but those who looked at the play from a true sporting view will agree that it was a base ball game. There were the little runs of good and hard luck, there was good pitching, there were strikeouts which showed the pitching was good, there were rallies at the bat when the ball bounded with a clear ring towards the outfield, and in one case past the outfield into another lot; there were good exhibitions of fielding on both sides.

The Seamen Gunners won by superior all-round play. Their team had the practice; they played a more even game, and made no misplays. The steady practice of the past couple of months showed in the smoothly oiled and perfectly trained machine that took in every chance and was ready to take advantage of every slip-up on the other side. It was undoubtedly the best exhibition of base ball that the Seamen Gunners have given. They made more hits and runs than in some other games, but at no time did they have any license to expect an easy thing. They made runs because they batted, and they batted good pitching and had to make clean hits against the fast fielding of the Association team.

There were some exceptionally clever bits of fielding by the Y. M. C. A. team which again and again kept down the hitting average of the Seamen Gunners and held the score down. Paddy Martin at second seemed in a class by himself. He drew the only base on balls and in his other three times made three hits, a single, double and triple; stole three bases, had three putouts and five assists, and scooped in one back of short that saved some additional bases. There was nothing of the second class about that exhibition. Moran made a pretty stop which saved bases, and played cleverly. Sheehan did well in the fielding line and Butler caught two that seemed to have the safe mark on them as they left the bat. Blackwell, in centre, also showed what could be done in the fielding line, not alone in gathering them in, but in holding down safe ones to the lowest limit. Altogether the fielding was of excellent quality.

The Y. M. C. A. team was a strong team but it lacked practice, at the bat and in the field. The errors they made were all minor ones showing lack of practice and too much of a disposition to throw the ball when it should be held. At the bat they showed that they did not have the practice of their opponents, lacking confidence. Still they did some hitting. It will be noticed, however, that while the Association outfield had seven putouts, the Seamen Gunner outfielders had not one and against 16 assists by the Y. M. C. A. infield the Seamen Gunners had but eight, showing that the difference in the hitting was greater than the base hit column shows, and that the Y. M. C. A. fielders had very much more to do than the Seamen Gunners. Clarke pitched a strong game and had them guessing, even if they would not strike out. McCreary pitched an even strong game, allowing only one base on balls and being always steady and full of confidence. He seemed to know he had a good team behind him, and even when it looked like a balloon ascension in the fourth, when a home run and a double followed in rapid succession, he did not weaken for an instant but continued to throw them in fast and accurately. His support was good. Higgins at second being a special stumbling block. Boyer robbed Wessell of a hit in the seventh.

The crowd on both sides was a feature. The Seamen Gunners, with banners and megaphones and voices that never weakened, occupied their usual position, back of third, and they were in action all the time. The Y. M. C. A. rooters were on the other side. There were quiet folks also on both sides, but the noise-makers were the ones who were prominent and each side gave a good exhibition when there was a chance. The Seamen Gunners had the most chances and made the most noise, but they had no monopoly.

The score by innings will show how the game progressed. The Association team did not score until the fourth, when Sheehan, the first man at bat, drove one into the circus lot over right centre, for a home run, the first on the grounds. In the ninth Martin opened with a triple and scored on Pendergast's "Texas leaguer" over second. The score:

The Seamen Gunners expected to meet the All Army team, made up of Fort Adams and Fort Rodman men, at the Port yesterday. At the close of the militia week the All Army team won from the Seamen Gunners. The Fort Rodman men did not appear and a team from Adams was played. The pitching of the Adams man, McKinney, was good, and Wilkinson played well behind the bat. Freeman was active at second, and the left fielder was "on his job," but the rest seemed to have caught the lazy fever. On the other hand Butler, who pitched for the Seamen Gunners, was in fine fettle, accurate and speedy, and mowed the opposing batters down. The second man up in the first inning reached first by striking at a low one which got away from Catcher Kemp. After that not a Fort Adams player saw first. Not a hit was made by the soldiers, not an error was made by the Seamen Gunners, who finally became tired of piling up runs and allowed themselves to be put out. The final score was 19 to 0.

NAVAL BATTALION'S CRUISE.

Annual Tour of Reserves for Instruction on the Prairie—Trip to Norfolk Included.

The annual cruise of the Rhode Island Naval Battalion for instruction and experience will take place this summer, from August 31 to September 8, inclusive, on cruiser Prairie. The battalion will leave here Saturday, August 31, and will return according to the schedule, Sunday September 8, some time in the forenoon.

The Prairie is a large, comfortable the naval militiamen made their cruise in the summers of 1899 and 1900. She is an auxiliary cruiser and is equipped with a battery of eight six-inch guns and eight six-1pounders. She is now at Norfolk, Va., with three divisions of the Connecticut naval militiamen.

The Rhode Island battalion will also go to Norfolk, and while there will be no interruption of instruction work, the men will have shore leave at night, and will thus get opportunities to visit the Jamestown Ter-Centennial Exposition. From there the Prairie will go out to the naval training grounds, several miles off the mouth of the Chesapeake, for target practice.

The Prairie is a large, comfortable and roomy vessel, more than ample to accommodate the 200 men comprising the four divisions of the Naval Battalion of this state. It is expected that the lateness of the cruise may make it difficult for some of the men to get away, but it is anticipated that from 140 to 150 will paricipate in the tour of duty.

The Providence, East Providence and Bristol divisions will be brought to Newport on one of the government boats stationed here, which will go to Providence early on the morning of August 31 and take aboard the two divisions and the headquarters outfit, and then touch at Bristol for the division there on the way to this city.

The Prairie is in command of Commander H. A. Dunn, U. S. N., who was appointed from Rhode Island to Annapolis when he began his training for a naval career. The drill through which the battalion will be put will be of the same general routine as on previous cruises. It will include practice with the Morris tube, preliminary to the target practice, and the 20 best men at this drill will be picked for gun pointers when the actual target practice with a regulation target begins at sea.

The state of Rhode Island gets about $1,500 of the annual appropriation by the government of $60,000 for the naval militia. The vessel for the cruise was assigned upon request made by Commander William C. Bliss through the adjutant general's office to the bureau at the United States Navy Department having charge of the naval militia affairs. While on the cruise the men will receive the regular stipend of $1.50 a day with rations.

HARD GALE HAMPERS WELLMAN

Damage Repaired and Inflation of Polar Airship to Begin.

SPITZBERGEN, July 25, via Tromsoe, Aug. 4.—The Wellman polar expedition has been hampered greatly by a high wind, which at times became a violent gale, threatening the balloon house. The damage done has been repaired, and as arrangements have now been perfected and the gas apparatus has been found to work most satisfactorily, it is hoped, unless further accidents occur, to start for the Pole about the middle of August. The inflation of the balloon will begin tomorrow.

The unusually bad weather has prevented ships reaching Spitzbergen. The Prince of Monaco is reported ice bound to the south.

Mrs. B. Perceival Sherman, with her family, has been visiting her sister, Miss Sleeper of Providence.

Rev. Charles Stalker and wife spoke at the camp ground Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Benjamin Dennis of Providence has been spending a few days in town.

Mr. Seth Anthony, who is now at the Newport Hospital with a fractured knee, was run into and knocked down on Honyman hill, Middletown, last Thursday. He had concluded his business in that locality and was coming down the hill, when a man came scorching down on a bicycle and before Mr. Anthony could get out of the way knocked him to the ground. The man remained, giving his address, until a carriage passed, in which Mr. Anthony was placed and taken eventually to the hospital. It is not a severe case, Mr. Anthony's accident is the fifth occurring in Portsmouth or to Portsmouth residents since June.

PUBLIC LAWS, PASSED AT THE JANUARY SESSION, 1907.

[The Chapters of the Public Laws are numbered continuously from the General Laws, Revision of 1896.]

CHAPTER 1454.

AN ACT to Regulate the Stamping of Articles of Merchandise Made of Gold or Silver, or Their Alloys, and For Other Purposes.

(Passed April 25, 1907.)

It is enacted by the General Assembly as follows:

Section 1. Any person, firm, corporation, or association who or which makes for sale or sells, or offers to sell or dispose of, or has in his, her, or its possession with intent to sell or dispose of, any article of merchandise made in whole or in part of gold or any alloy of gold, and having stamped, branded, engraved, or imprinted thereon, or upon any tag, card, or label attached thereto, or upon any box, package, cover, or wrapper in which said article is encased or enclosed, any mark indicating, or designed or intended to indicate, that the gold or alloy of gold in such article is of a greater degree of fineness than the actual fineness or quality of such gold or alloy, unless the actual fineness of such gold or alloy, in the case of flat ware and watch cases, be not less by more than three one-thousandths parts, and in the case of all other articles be not less by more than one-half karat than the fineness indicated by the marks stamped, branded, engraved, or imprinted upon any part of such article, or upon any tag, card, or label attached thereto, or upon any box, package, cover, or wrapper in which such article is encased or enclosed, according to the standards and subject to the qualifications hereinafter set forth, is guilty of a misdemeanor: Provided, that in any test for the ascertainment of the fineness of the gold or its alloy in any such article, according to the foregoing standards, the part of the gold or of its alloy taken for the test, analysis, or assay shall be such part or portion as does not contain or have attached thereto any solder or alloy of inferior fineness used for brazing or uniting the parts of the article (all such gold, alloys, and solder being assayed as one piece) shall not be less by more than one karat than the fineness indicated by the mark stamped, branded, engraved, or imprinted upon such article, or upon any tag, card, or label attached thereto, or upon any box, package, cover, or wrapper in which said article is encased or enclosed.

Sec. 2. (a) Any person, firm, corporation, or association who or which makes for sale or sells, or offers to sell or dispose of, or has in his, her, or its possession with intent to sell or dispose of, any article of merchandise made in whole or in part of silver or of any alloy of silver, and having marked, stamped, branded, engraved, or imprinted thereon, or upon any tag, card, or label attached thereto, or upon any box, package, cover, or wrapper in which said article is encased or enclosed, the words "sterling silver" or "sterling," or any colorable imitation thereof, unless 925-1,000ths of the component parts of the metal appearing or purporting to be silver, of which such article is manufactured, are pure silver, subject to the qualifications hereinafter set forth, is guilty of a misdemeanor: Provided, that in the case of all such articles there shall be allowed a divergence in fineness of 4-1,000ths parts from the foregoing standard.

(b) Any person, firm, corporation, or association who or which makes for sale or sells, or offers to sell or dispose of, or has in his, her, or its possession with intent to sell or dispose of, any article of merchandise made in whole or in part of silver or of any alloy of silver, and having marked, stamped, branded, engraved, or imprinted thereon, or upon any tag, card, or label attached thereto, or upon any box, package, cover, or wrapper in which such article is encased or enclosed, the words "coin" or "coin silver," or any colorable imitation thereof, unless 900-1,000ths of the component parts of the metal appearing or purporting to be silver, of which such article is manufactured, are pure silver, subject to the qualifications hereinafter set forth, is guilty of a misdemeanor: Provided, that in the case of all such articles there shall be allowed a divergence in fineness of 4-1,000ths parts from the foregoing standards.

(c) Any person, firm, corporation, or association who or which makes for sale or sells, or offers to sell or dispose of, or has in his, her, or its possession with intent to sell or dispose of, any article of merchandise made in whole or in part of silver or of any alloy of silver, and having stamped, branded, engraved, or imprinted thereon, or upon any tag, card, or label attached thereto, or upon any box, package, cover, or wrapper in which said article is encased or enclosed, any mark or word (other than the word "sterling" or the word "coin") indicating, or designed or intended to indicate, that the silver or alloy of silver in said article is of greater degree of fineness than the actual fineness or quality of such silver or alloy, unless the actual fineness of the silver or alloy of silver of which said article is composed be not less by more than 4-1,000ths parts than the actual fineness indicated by the said mark or word (other than the word "sterling" or "coin") stamped, branded, engraved, or imprinted upon any part of said article, or upon any tag, card, or label attached thereto, or upon any box, package, cover, or wrapper in which said article is encased or enclosed, subject to the qualifications hereinafter set forth, is guilty of a misdemeanor.

(d) Provided, that in any test for the ascertainment of the fineness of any such article mentioned in this section, according to the foregoing standards, the part of the article taken for the test, analysis, or assay shall be such part or portion as does not contain or have attached thereto any solder or alloy of inferior metal used for brazing or uniting the parts of such article: and provided, further, and in addition to the foregoing test and standards, that the actual fineness of the entire quantity of metal purporting to be silver contained in any article mentioned in this section, including all solder or alloy of inferior fineness used for brazing or uniting the parts of any such article (all such silver, alloy, or solder being assayed as one piece), shall not be less by more than 10-1,000ths parts than the fineness indicated, according to the foregoing standards, by the mark stamped, branded, engraved, or imprinted upon such article, or upon any tag, card, or label attached thereto, or upon any box, package, cover, or wrapper in which said article is encased or enclosed.

Sec. 3. Any person, firm, corporation, or association who or which makes for sale or sells, or offers to sell or dispose of, or has in his, her, or its possession with intent to sell or dispose of, any article of merchandise made in whole or in part of inferior metal having deposited or plated thereon or brazed or otherwise affixed thereto a plate, plating, covering, or sheet of gold or of any alloy of gold, and which article is known in the market as "rolled gold plate," "gold plate," "gold filled," or "gold electroplate," or by any similar designation, and having stamped, branded, engraved, or imprinted thereon, or upon any tag, card, or label attached thereto, or upon any box, package, cover, or wrapper in which said article is encased or enclosed, any word or mark usually employed to indicate the fineness of gold, unless said word be accompanied by other words plainly indicating that such article or some part thereof is made of rolled gold plate, or gold plate, or gold electroplate, or is gold filled, as the case may be, is guilty of a misdemeanor.

Sec. 4. Any person, firm, corporation, or association who or which makes for sale or sells, or offers to sell or dispose of, or has in his, her, or its possession with intent to sell or dispose of, any articles of merchandise made in whole or in part of inferior metal having deposited or plated thereon or brazed or otherwise affixed thereto a plate, plating, covering, or sheet of silver or of any alloy of silver, and which article is known in the market as "silver plate" or "silver electroplate," or by any similar designation, and having stamped, branded, engraved, or imprinted thereon, or upon any tag, card, or label attached thereto, or upon any box, package, cover, or wrapper in which said article is encased or enclosed, the word "sterling" or the word "coin," either alone or in conjunction with any other words or marks, is guilty of a misdemeanor.

Sec. 5. Every person, firm, corporation, or association guilty of a violation of any one of the preceding sections of this act, and every officer, manager, director, or managing agent of any such person, firm, corporation, or association directly participating in such violation or consenting thereto, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $500 or imprisonment for not more than three months, or both, at the discretion of the court: Provided, that if the person charged with violation of this act shall prove that the article concerning which the charge is made was manufactured prior to the 15th day of June, 1907, then the charge shall be dismissed.

Sec. 6. This act shall take effect on the 1st day of July, A. D. 1907, and Chapter 339 of the Public Laws, passed January session, 1896, and all other acts and parts of acts inconsistent herewith, are hereby repealed.

I certify the foregoing to be true copies.

Attest: CHARLES P. BENNETT, Secretary of State.

Some people think they cannot take Olive Oil on their salads because it doesn't agree with them. If all such people will try Maspero's Extra Fine which is pure and sweet and easily digested and helps to digest other foods, they will find that they can take Olive Oil with their salads and enjoy them and that they will be in much better health for doing so. The trouble is with the kind of oil they have been trying—not with their digestion.

NEW YORK POLICE DOING THEIR BEST.

1,000 Plain-Clothes Men Scattered Through City.

Exasperation Nears Frenzy, and Homicidal Mania Feared.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—The fact that twice, yesterday, mob vengeance held sway, and lynching was narrowly averted, has added to the seriousness of the situation in this city, caused by the recent remarkable series of crimes, in which women and young girls were the victims. The mob attacks reveal a state of public exasperation approaching frenzy, which, it is feared, may easily lead to serious disorder. Prompt action by the police alone saved the two men accused Sunday from summary justice, especially in the case of George Kestner, a Russian bookbinder, around whose neck a mob had tied a rope when the police reached the scene in force. It is noteworthy that the other man attacked, Louis Conconelo, was innocent of any attempt at crime, and indicates how readily a mistake can be made in time of public agitation or excitement.

The police are bending every effort to give adequate protection, and to further this end 1,000 plain-clothes men have been scattered about the city, particularly in the congested quarters, the scene of most of the assaults.

The first organized body to take up the question is the Central Federated Union, which has appointed a committee to call upon the mayor with a demand that he take action which will put a stop to the attacks on children. It is stated that if the city authorities do not quickly stop the crimes Governor Hughes will be appealed to. A negro delegate spoke at the meeting at which the committee was appointed, in praise of the "quick justice of the South." This is significant of the feeling which exists in some quarters. Another suggestion made at the meeting was that unless the attacks are quickly stopped the governor should call out the state militia.

Late last night the police received news of another attack. It occurred in the suburb of Richmond Hill. Jennie Smith, 22 years of age, was attacked by two men while on her way home. Her screams brought assistance, and one of the assailants was captured.

No further disorders as the result of outbreaks of mob vengeance on the assailants of women and children were reported early today, and the police have redoubled their efforts to prevent further assaults. Many parents throughout the city are keeping their children indoors, while in the East Side, where Katie Tietschler was maltreated and murdered, the thousands of children who play in the streets are under the watchful eyes of mothers, sitting at the windows and on the doorsteps.

The numerous attacks on children, and the resulting morbidness developed by investigation of the cases, the police think, may develop a homicidal mania, which will fasten itself upon the weaker members of society in the city, and make itself manifest in further attacks and assaults. The police are apprehensive that an unbridled state of hysteria may be induced by the anger and outrage over the assaults, and result in mob demonstrations wherever arrests may be effected.

Louis Conconelo, the innocent man who was mistaken by the mob as the one it was hunting, and who was set upon and beaten yesterday, will probably die. George Kestner, a bookbinder, is in the hospital today, suffering from injuries received at the hands of a mob which tore his clothes from his back; he was saved from being hanged to a lamppost only by the timely arrival of the police reserves. The mob fought to get at Kestner to the doors of the station house. The police are of the opinion that Kestner attempted no overt act against the two children, whom some person accused him of trying to assault. An East Indian pahaist, Hugo Sabaro, gave some children a few pennies yesterday. His motives were construed as sinister, and the police saved him from a crowd which gathered quickly and sought a summary punishment for the supposed offence.

The arraignments of two Italians today in Lee avenue court, Williamsburg, disclosed another attempt to assault a young woman last night. The two assailants were nearly lynched by a mob, which the police finally drove off. The young woman was Miss Sadie Hazenling, niece of State Senator Hazenling. She was walking with her fiance last night when two Italians, who gave their names as John Mantelone and Peter Condaso, suddenly attacked her. The Italians were overpowering Miss Hazenling and her fiance when the girl's cries brought a crowd, which gave chase. The Italians were finally captured and the crowd, in angry mood, began to make threats. A rope was brought and 50 men made a rush for the Italians, who were being hurried to the station house by the police. The crowd scattered when the police drew their revolvers. Miss Hazeling and her fiance were uninjured.

Commissioner O'Keefe, who during the absence of Police Commissioner Bingham is in charge of the police department, called the inspectors together today for a conference to determine upon further police measures to protect women and children from assault. Commissioner O'Keefe directed that the attention of every member of the force be turned to the crimes against women and children, and that all patrolmen tell mothers along their posts to keep a watchful eye over their daughters. The commissioner further ordered that the patrolmen ask families to communicate with the police department just as soon as children are found missing. Cases of assault and missing children are to have precedence over all other cases in the department.

One man died today as the result of race riots which started yesterday over a ten-cent bet on a ball game. The dead man is John McCue, a negro, who was badly beaten in the fight with the whites. Over a score of persons are recovering today from injuries received in the riot.

FIVE CHICAGO ASSAULTS.

Killing of Four Men and Wounding of Another Arouse Police Force.

CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—Five mysterious assaults, in which four men were killed and another fatally wounded, aroused the entire police force to energetic action early today. The victims in the affair were:

Pasario Rocco, found on the doorstep of his home, with two stiletto wounds in his body. He had been instantly killed by the knife thrusts, both of which went entirely through his lungs.

Edward Smith, a policeman, shot and killed by an unknown man while walking a short distance from his home.

John L. Barbour, found dead on the Illinois Central tracks, 50 feet north of the Thirty-first street suburban station. The head had been cut off by a passing train, and was found 100 feet down the track. It is believed that Barbour committed suicide, but there are circumstances which make it doubtful.

John Naughton, 5,736 Lowe avenue, died in the hospital after being assaulted by three strangers at Thirty-seventh street and Lowe avenue.

William Donovan, dying in the county hospital from a bullet wound in the abdomen. Donovan was found in a basement at 448 Hermitage avenue, and said he had been robbed by three men, one of whom shot him when he attempted to resist.

In none of the cases have the police been able thus far to obtain the slightest clue to the murderers.

WILL DIE ANYHOW.

New York Italian Refuses to Submit to Operation to Save His Life.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—A peculiar process of reasoning will probably cost Edouard Correnio, an Italian, his life, though the physicians at Fordham hospital, where Correnio is dying, hope that their argumentative abilities, supplemented by their surgical skill, may save the Italian from death. It appears that Correnio was assaulted by a number of countrymen, who brutally kicked him. Blood poisoning set in, and the hospital physicians told the dying Italian that an amputation would save him. Correnio calmly refused to submit to an operation saying: "If I live to go out I shall kill my assailants, and then I'll die in the electric chair. I might as well die now."

No amount of persuasion today could induce Correnio to change his mind. Three were arrested today charged with having assaulted Correnio.

ONLY JOLTED PASSENGERS.

Unsuccessful Attempt Made to Wreck New York-Chicago Limited.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 5.—It was learned today that an attempt was made yesterday morning to wreck the New York and Chicago limited express on the Pennsylvania railroad at a point just outside of Allegheny. Spiked bars had been nailed to a tie, and rested on each of the rails on track No. 4, but the enormous weight of the mogul engine drawing the train prevented derailment, and the only effect was to jolt the passengers.

Railroad detectives have been working on the case since yesterday, but have so far been unable to obtain a clue to the identity of the persons responsible for the outrage. It is the opinion of the railroad officials that the attempt was made by either former employes or by those familiar with the working of the road, as the spot selected was the safest, because of its being under the signal bridge, and the manner in which the bars were placed indicated that those who drove the bolts were familiar with this kind of work.

SMUGGLED 20 CARS OF WHEAT.

Formal Charges Preferred Against Mayor Montemayor of Juarez.

EL PASO, Texas, Aug. 5.—The supreme federal court, sitting in Juarez for the investigation of the whole smuggling operations uncovered in that city, preferred formal charges yesterday against Mayor Silvano Montemayor, who disappeared Monday night of last week. Smuggling of 20 cars of wheat is specified. If convicted, the mayor is liable for duties and penalties amounting to $60,000, and 12 years' imprisonment. Other charges much more serious are pending against Montemayor. There is no abatement of public excitement, and it has been found necessary to call for reinforcements of federal troops to guard the prisons, courts and property.

NOT SATISFIED WITH VOTE.

Whatever Result of Mississippi Election, There Will Be Contest.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Aug. 5.—The Commercial Appeal today says: That there will be a contest, no matter which way the Senatorial primary in Mississippi went, is the information that was received by this paper from several reliable sources in Mississippi last night. Friends of both candidates are not satisfied with the closeness of the vote and the total vote cast. Revised figures have reduced Congressman John Sharp Williams's lead to 765 votes, and this may be reduced still further when complete and corrected returns are received from several other counties.

TURKS THREATEN TOWN OF URUMIAH.

Near-by Village Destroyed; 78 Persons Killed.

Great Britain and Russia May Be Appealed to for Aid.

TEHERAN, Persia, Aug. 5.—The incursions of Turkish troops across the northwest frontier of Persia, which for some time had been in abeyance, have again broken out. A serious raid has occurred near Urumiah, 6,000 turkish troops, with artillery, having crossed the frontier and destroyed the village of Mavaneh. Seventy-eight villagers, of whom 60 were women and children, mostly Christians, were killed. Subsequently the Turks drove a small force of Persian troops from a near-by camp, and installed themselves in it.

According to an unofficial report, a large body of Persian cavalry has joined the Turkish invaders, and the combined force is said to be threatening the town of Urumiah, 12 miles west of Lake Urumiah, and 64 miles from Tabriz. Urumiah, which has a population estimated at between 30,000 and and 50,000 persons, including many Christians, is noted as a centre of missionary activity, and is the seat of the Fiske Seminary for Girls and of Urumiah College. It is considered probable that Russia and Great Britain will be appealed to to bring pressure to bear upon Turkey, with the view of stopping the raid.

FINANCIAL.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5, Wall Street—The stock market opened weak, with Amalgamated Copper at 83½ to 83, American Locomotive 58½, American Smelting 111½, Anaconda 62¾, Atchison 91, Brooklyn Transit 56, Colorado Fuel & Iron 29⅝, Great Northern preferred 131¾, Louisville 111½, Missouri, Kansas & Texas 38¾, Northern Pacific 130⅜, Pennsylvania 122, Reading 101¾, Rock Island 21, St. Paul 131, Southern Pacific 88⅜, Union Pacific 142½, United States Steel 35, United States Steel preferred 100¾.

10—Prices of stocks broke sharply in the opening dealings, from the sentimental influence of the heavy fines imposed Saturday on the Standard Oil Company. The London market was closed for a holiday, but the dealings showed considerable animation. Brooklyn Transit fell 2 points, Anaconda 1⅝, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Northern Pacific, St. Paul, Reading, Amalgamated Copper and American Smelting 1¾ to 1⅝, Atchison and Sloss-Sheffield Steel a point and Kansas & Texas and Rock Island large fractions. Cleveland, C. C. & St. Louis sold at a recovery of 2¾ from a heavy decline of 7.

11—Save for a few belated selling orders the market met support immediately after the opening, and recovered about half of its decline. The Harriman stocks rallied briskly, but Union Pacific became feverish and heavy on the else. The market was quite dull at 11 o'clock, and heavy in tone. Canadian Pacific, Great Northern preferred and the Ore Certificates fell 1 to 1¾, and Chicago & Alton preferred 1¾.

Noon—Money on call unquoted; prime mercantile paper, 6 @ 6½ per cent. The market was dull and drooping, but changes were small. Northwestern and Norfolt & Western declined 1, and sugar preferred 2. United States reduction preferred rose 1. Bonds were easy.

MYOPIA TAKES FIRST EVENT.

Westchester Starts In Well In Point Judith Polo, but Loses Ground and Fails to Recover.

In the first event for the Rhode Island cups in the polo tournament at the Point Judith Country Club, Narragansett Pier, Saturday afternoon, Myopia second defeated the Westchester Country Club by a score of 10¾ to 8¾.

Myopia received three goals by handicap, which was just sufficient to give them the game, for the Westchester four earned more goals than the Boston team. Westchester started the contest finely and gave good promise of winning, but soon fell back and by light hitting, poor direction and lack of team work allowed Myopia to get a lead lead.

The Westchesters seemed to have recovered from their lethargy in the final period and put considerable spirit into the play. Although they gained many goals, the time was too limited to recover lost ground and the match was lost.

Rogers and Tweed did the best work for Myopia, though Dorman covered back well. Paul J. Rainey was the star man for Westchester, his cutting the ball being done with greater accuracy than his associates.

The teams and handicaps were as follows:

Myopia Second—D. P. Rogers 1, H. Tweed 3, H. Hadden 2, G. H. Norman 3, total handicap 9.

Westchester—E. S. Reynal 4, J. C. Cooley 4, S. C. Love 2, Paul Rainey 2; total handicap 12.

Goals were made as follows:

For Myopia Second, H. Hadden 1, H. Tweed 4, D. P. Rogers 3, by handicap 3, less ½ goal on a safety; net total, 10¾ goals.

For Westchester—Paul Rainey 4, E. S. Reynal 2, J. C. Cooley 2, S. C. Love 1, less ¼ goal on a safety; net total, 8¾ goals.

WINS STEWART CUP.

Mrs. Eugene Hale, Jr., Secures Trophy, Playing 18 Holes in 94 Strokes in Saturday's Golf Match.

On the links of the Newport Golf Club Saturday, there was a large field of players for the cup offered by Mr. Lispenard Stewart. The cup was won by Mrs. Eugene Hale, Jr., who made the 18 holes in 94 strokes, which with her handicap allowance gave here a net score of 74. Miss Anna Sands was second, with a gross score of 94 and a net score of 75; Clarence W. Dolan, with a gross score of 84 and a net score of 76 and Alexander Morten, with a gross score of 81 and a net score of 77 followed. Harold A. Sands, Robert W. Goelet and Robert Sedgwick, who were scratch players, and Roderick Terry, Jr., tied 80.

Other net scores were W. P. Thompson 83, Royal Phelps Carroll and Thomas Sidell 85, A. G. Fox 87 and Henry R. Sedgwick 89. Others playing were R. L. Beeckman, Augustus Jay, A. Lanfaer Norrie, Miss Maude Wetmore, Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer, Mrs. Oliver G. Jennings, William H. Sands and Mrs. Royal Phelps Carroll.

FOR THE FLETCHER CUP.

Novice Leads Fleet, Duchess Second and Bambino Third—Jamestown Boats Make Good Showing.

Fourteen yachts took part in the first race for the J. E. Fletcher cup from Bristol, Saturday. There were three class O, eight class P, one class Q and two class R boats. The course was from Bristol, around Brenton Reef lightship, up the west channel, around the south end of Prudence and back to Bristol, 32½ miles. It was a beat down the bay and a run up. A calm which delayed the boats an hour was encountered between Sands Point and Gould island, but except for that there was a good breeze not enough to suit some but enough to give good racing.

Mr. A. L. Sands's fast sloop Novice led the fleet, finishing 21 seconds ahead of Duchess, of class O, with Bambino, of Class O, a close third. Peri II, W. J. Rooks, which finished fourth won out on time allowance by 16 seconds over Novice whose actual time was 6 hours, 53 minutes, 22 seconds. Skraeling, E. Van Vleck of Jamestown, was seventh, with elapsed time of 7:35.55, and Mayanni, K. Dodge, of Jamestown, was eighth, with 7:51:01 elapsed time. Kildee, the new Herreshoff boat in class R, was No. 11. She had a big allowance but was far behind the second last boat at the finish. The two Jamestown boats beat out both Little Haste and Little Rhody in corrected time, and like the Novice made a good showing, the larger boats having the advantage in such a race which the allowance does not begin to make up.

There will be another race for this trophy September 7.

FINAL SIMMONS REHEARSALS

Mr. Earle C. Simmons is personally conducting the final week of rehearsals by his company. The big tent was erected this morning and carpenters are now at work on the stage, door and bleachers, which will take only two days, as they have been in preparation for the past three weeks and they are made in sections, ready to place in position. The entire tent will be lighted by electricity, and the effort is being made to have this open-air pavilion resemble a theatre in every respect, and it is likely to be more comfortable during this weather than a winter play house.

"MISS BOULEVARD," FROM PARIS.

An article of great interest which has aroused enthusiasm among the children of St. Mary's parish is a beautiful French doll imported from Paris by Father Meenan, which is to be disposed of at the Fair to be held for the benefit of the parish at the end of this month. The doll has brought her trunk with her, and it is filled with a choice collection of Paris creations in the robe and millinery line. Not only the little ones but many grown up people are in love with dainty "Miss Boulevard" and she is to place herself and her stylish outfit on exhibition in a show window on Bellevue avenue during all this week. Preparations for the holding of the fair are already in progress and point to a successful and entertaining week.

Battery Out of Commission for Lack of Men to Work It.

WEALTHY MEN AS DIPLOMATS.

America's Ambassadors Pay Rental Almost Equal to Salary as it Owns no Foreign Homes.

[Washington Times]

There has been lately a notable disposition to accentuate the inquiry whether it really pays to have the United States represented at the great capitals of Europe by men of great fortunes, on the theory that nobody else can live up to the social requirements of the posts.

These embassies are paid salaries of $17,500, which is rather insignificant when compared to the salaries which other first-class countries give their diplomats, and still less adequate when it is taken into consideration that the United States has not provided any ambassadorial residences in Europe. House rent as a rule costs as much or more than the salary of an ambassador at a first-class court.

A number of incidents have attracted special attention to the fact that these posts are generally held by men whose wealth constitutes at least a very important qualification for them. There was the lamented affair of "Bellamy and Maria" Storer, which embarrassed the administration at home and likewise abroad. The Storers were people of great wealth and sundry fads which they apparently conceived it an important part of their duty to promote. Their promotion methods got them tangled up with the diplomatic relations of this country to the Catholic Church and to two or three countries, and the exposure which took place following the removal of Ambassador Storer was more edifying than gratifying.

Recently there has been an uncomfortable volume of protest against the social attitude of Ambassador Tower, at Berlin, who has been accused of too strong a preference for the members of very wealthy families from America, and whose social attentions have been alleged to be discriminatory and decidedly prejudiced in favor of people of high station at home. The exact merits of the charges that the ambassador made himself unnecessarily responsible for Henry Lehr during that gentleman's visit in Berlin, and thereby assumed a certain onus in connection with some manifestations of careless manners by Mr. Lehr, have never been very fully thrashed out, but the affair has not left an entirely good taste. Neither has the incident in the Thaw trial which dragged into that case the name of Craig Wadsworth, attache at the American embassy in London.

A year or two ago there was an investigation of scandalous charges against D. E. Thompson, then ambassador at Rio Janerio, against whom some extremely pointed and disagreeable charges were made. There followed a very careful investigation by the State department, as a result of which Thompson was exonerated, and soon afterwards he was transferred to the post of ambassador at Mexico. Thompson is a Nebraska millionaire, and, following a disappointment in his failure to be elected senator, was given the Brazilian embassy as a consolation prize. His diplomatic experience had been confined to conducting the relations between the Lincoln Nebraska Public Service corporation, which he owned, and the town council.

Lately there has come from London report of an interesting feud between Ambassador Whitelaw Reid, another of the very rich members of the corps, and Robert J. Wynne, consul general to London. Mr. Wynne was Postmaster General before he became consul general, and the stories that he has been violently snubbed by the diplomatic representation there have not been cheerfully received. It has been explained that the attaches and secretaries of the embassy have assumed general social precedence over Mr. Wynne and his wife on the ground that diplomacy proper was superior to the mere consular service, which represented merely trade interests. This may be good etiquette, but it has jarred people's sensibilities who fancy that trade hardly ought to be despised by the foreign agents of as distinctively a commercial country as the United States.

It is the pretty uniform method of important countries nowadays in selecting ambassadors for the United States to send men who will be peculiarly qualified to get into sympathetic relations with the people and the officials of this country. Sternburg of Germany and Jusserand of France are especially good examples, both being old friends of President Roosevelt, decidedly chummy with him and peculiarly effective representatives of their countries. Then Ambassador Bryce was sent here by the British government largely because of his literary work, which has made him widely known and much beloved in the United States. The feeling is strong that the United States could well afford to select its foreign representatives with a like view to their special qualifications for the work of their positions, rather than for the social expenditures presumed to be necessary.

The notion that ambassadors must be "spenders" is lately become offensive, not only to a large proportion of plain Americans who travel abroad, but also to many of the people of the countries to which these men of wealth are accredited. Other countries send ambassadors who cannot and do not wish to compete with the Americans in spending.

ALL PRIZE FOWL

[Lippincott's.]

Mrs. Goldvein of Cripple Creek, having unexpectedly come into a fortune through a lucky strike, set up a country home near Denver, where she lived in style. One day while she was showing some of her old-time friends about the place they came to the poultry yard.

"What beautiful chickens!" the visitors exclaimed.

"All prize fowl," haughtily explained the hostess.

"Do they lay every day?" was the next question.

"Oh, they could, of course," was the reply, "but in our position it is not necessary for them to do so."

GUARDIANS OF OUR COASTS.

ing results, and he finds it difficult to realize what a complicated network of machinery a modern fortress is. To operate two of the great guns (occupying one emplacement) demands the services of 88 men, and an equal number are needed to work a group of six small-calibre quick firers.

It has been said that the small-calibre guns are used to cover and protect the mine fields—that is to say, to prevent an enemy from destroying the mines in a channel by grappling for them and cutting their cables, or by exploding them with torpedoes of their own. This is obviously a matter of utmost importance, and the watching of the channel must be kept up at night, as well as by day, with the help of powerful searchlights. To provide the searchlights requisite for this purpose, $2,897,000 is needed. In addition to which, large sums ought to be expended for the perfecting of range-finding systems at various forts, and for the establishment of power plants to make electricity. In a modern fortress electricity is utilized for the searchlights, for illuminating the gun-pits at night, for telephone and telegraph connections covering all parts of the works, and for operating the ammunition hoists and the machinery of the disappearing gun-carriages.

The accuracy of the gun-fire directed from a seacoast fort depends mainly upon a system of range-finding and position-finding, for which telescopes are used. These telescopes are connected by telephone and telegraph with a "plotting room," which is a small underground chamber lined with concrete. At brief intervals reports are received by wire in the plotting-room from the observers in charge of the telescopes, and the position of a ship off-shore is marked on a chart—all of this being accomplished with such astonishing rapidity that information of the exact situation of the vessel is conveyed, by way of the plotting room, to the guns within 10 seconds of time. Thus it is that accurate shooting can be done with both guns and mortars—the latter being fired in groups of four, so as to give a shotgun effect—at distances of over two miles.

In some places—particularly at the entrances of Long Island sound and Chesapeake bay, in Puget sound, and in the harbor of San Francisco—it is proposed to employ submarine boats as auxiliaries to the shore defenses. One such craft at each of these stations would serve the purpose its function consisting in acting as scout or picket. Also, it would be extremely useful for repairing mine cables, being safe from attack while engaged in such work.

It may be added in this connection that experiments are now being made with a view to the utilization of automobile, otherwise known as "fish," torpedoes for attacking vessels from the shore—such torpedoes being made of exceptionally large size and capable of traveling 4,000 yards—at a speed something like 28 miles an hour. Especially in narrow channels such a weapon might be extremely effective. But there are situations where the water space is too wide for effective employment of fish torpedoes, and deep enough to render the establishment of satisfactory mine fields difficult—conditions under which the submarine boat is likely to prove a most efficient ally.

The northernmost of our coast forts are five, which protect two harbors in Maine. New Hampshire has three forts, all at Portsmouth. In Massachusetts the harbor of New Bedford has one fort, and that of Boston six. Narragansett bay has five forts, and the entrance to Long Island sound is guarded by four more, all of them very formidable. For New York city there are six fortresses—three in the neighborhood of Hellgate and three in the harbor. Philadelphia has three forts, Baltimore five, and Washington two, one on each side of the Potomac. Hampton Roads is defended by two forts. In North Carolina there is one fort, at Wilmington. At Charleston there are two fortresses, and in Beaufort river there is one. Savannah has one fort.

The chain of fortresses on the Gulf coast begins at Key West, where there is one. At Tampa there are two, at Pensacola two, at Mobile two, at New Orleans (between the city and the mouth of the Mississippi) two, and at Galveston three.

On the Pacific coast there are 13 forts in all—one at San Diego, five at San Francisco, three at the entrance of the Columbia river, one opposite Seattle (protecting the naval station there), and three at the entrance of Admiralty Inlet, a branch of Puget sound which runs up to Seattle and Tacoma.

In conclusion it may be said that, so far as fortresses are concerned, all that are necessary have been provided, except that two are badly needed to defend the entrance at Chesapeake bay. According to the War Department's estimate, it would cost $6,102,871 to build these forts, one on either side; in addition to which it would be necessary to expend $2,600,000 in creating an artificial island breakwater in the middle of the waterspace. Without such an island, hostile warships would be able to pass beyond effective range of the guns on either shore.

For the construction of proper fortifications to protect the entrances of the Panama canal $1,827,682 will be required. This can wait a while, but meanwhile about $20,000,000 is urgently needed for the erection of defenses in our various insular possessions—this sum including guns and $3,000,000 worth of ammunition. Beyond planting a few high-power cannon at Manila, we have done practically nothing as yet in the way of fortifying our newly-acquired islands, the Philippines, Guam, the Hawaiian group, and Porto Rico, which, so far as the first three are concerned, would be immediately seized by Japan in case of trouble with that power, without much hope of successful resistance on our part, owing to the inferiority of our naval strength in the Pacific. An awful situation that such a sequel may come some day. Our defensive policy has been "penny wise and pound foolish."

RAIN INTERFERES WITH RUN.

Causes Newport Boats to Give up Trip to Wickford—Edgewood Yachts Entertained.

The Edgewood Yacht Club started Saturday on its annual cruise, arriving at Bristol Saturday afternoon, after a run from home. Eight boats took part in the racing. Commodore Scattergood, on flagship Nautilus, was in charge of the run. Sunday the club was to leave for Wickford, and the boats of the Newport Yacht Club were to make a run to Wickford and join the up-the-bay yachtsmen for a part of the day. The rain of the morning prevented the Newport boats from starting. Things looked gloomy for sailing when the start should have been made if dinner was to be eaten at Wickford Later, however, the weather cleared and it was seen that a run could have been made, though it might have been a trifle late for dinner. Some of the motor boats, including Commodore Allen's Ahtreb, went up with parties and met the cruisers. Today the Edgewood Club and some of the Washington Park Club are expected here. The boats will be anchored off the house of the Newport Yacht Club, and will be entertained there during their stay. Thursday the boats will leave for Tiverton, where they will be entertained by the Fall River Yacht Club.

THE OCTOPUS THE BEST BOAT.

Submarine Board Finds the Lake and The Berger Inferior as Naval Weapons.

The report of the submarine board, of which Captain Adolph Marix was chairman and which conducted the tests of submarine boats Octopus and Lake and the Berger sub-surface boat, here in May, was made public Saturday. The Secretary of the Navy, in his instructions to the board, asked that it express an opinion based upon its findings of the relative merits of the boats submitted in competition, and accordingly the board submitted the following:

"It is the unanimous opinion of this board that the Octopus is the superior boat presented for these tests, and therefore that she is equal to the best boat now owned by the United States or under contract. The board is also of the opinion that a boat generally similar to the Octopus, but larger, would be a superior naval weapon."

The board adds the following opinion:

"That the type of submarines as represented by the Lake is, in the opinion of the board, inferior to the type as represented by the Octopus.

"The board is of the opinion that the tests of the sub-surface boat model did not develop that boats of this type built of a size suitable to render their qualities available are equal to the best torpedo boats now owned by the government."

Captain Marix filed a minority review respecting the matter of the sub-surface boat, in which he said:

"In my opinion the smallest size of sub-surface boat proposed by the company in their additional bids, fitted with a regular torpedo tube and able to make a speed of 15 knots, would be a weapon of great value additional to any now owned by the government; and this value would be enhanced by the rapidity and ease with which they could be constructed."

MISS BARBER'S ADDRESS AT TOWNSEND.

An Old Home day, and the one hundred and seventy-fifth anniversary of Townsend, Mass., August 1, Miss Edith A. Barber, a native of the town and supervisor of drawing in the Newport public schools gave an interesting address on the subject, "Education." Miss Barber spoke of the household in former times as an educational centre which co-operated with the public school, of the practical education of the past as contrasted with the theoretical education of today, of the true education as that which develops the powers and makes better men and women, and of good housekeeping as the "finest of fine arts."

In conclusion she urged her hearers to remember not only the sons and daughters of Townsend who have gone forth and won the world's applause, but also those who have remained behind and made Townsend a centre of industry.

Dinners were given by Mrs. E. J. Berwind, Mrs. E. T. Gerry, Mrs. J. Thompson Spencer, Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock and Mrs. Lorillard Spencer.

Yesterday luncheons were given by Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, Mrs. W. Storrs Wells and Mrs James B. Haggin, and dinners by Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer, Mrs. May Brady Hall and James T. Woodward.

Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs will give a dinner at her villa tonight, and tomorrow night Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish will give a dinner at the Bennett Club.

IT WASN'T HIS CLOTHES.

[Atlanta Constitution.]

In the early years of his ministry Bishop Bascomb of the Southern Methodist Church was severely handicapped, says the author of "Women of the Confederacy," by the fact that he was handsome and graceful. He was considered "too much of a dandy," and for a long time was sent on mountain circuits to bring him down to the level of old fashioned Methodism.

As a last resort, when he continued to appear "dandified," one of his mountain members persuaded the minister to wear a suit of homespun that he might be more in harmony with his listeners. The next morning he went early to service to see the success of his scheme.

When Mr. Bascomb appeared, as trig in homespun as he had been in broadcloth, the mountaineer's chagrin was intense.

"Well, I declare!" he exclaimed. "Go it your own way, Brother Bascomb. I give it up. It ain't your clothes that's so pretty; it's jist you."

CULTIVATING FLOWERS.

There are large sums of money to be made in the cultivation of flowers in the Riviera. In one season alone $2,000,000 worth were shipped away to foreign countries, the majority to England. It is so long a journey for delicate blooms to make, but they are so perfectly packed and kept en route that they reach their destination in excellent condition.
